Big Stick Over Coal Strike

Await Monday To See If Miners Have Back To Work Movement

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18 (AP)—The government held its big stick poised over the nationwide soft coal strike tonight, clinging to the uncertain hope of a general back-to-work movement on Monday.

The United Mine Workers' biggest local voted an almost-unanimous "no" to John L. Lewis' twice-issued orders to dig coal. Members of at least two other locals stalked out of meetings without even voting.

President Truman's coal advisers gave up hope of a week-end contract agreement. They recessed the talks in their fourth days, saying: "We are not making the progress we hoped for."

They told Mr. Truman so, in an oral but official report. They voiced relief, nevertheless, that "great many miners" will report for duty under the instructions wired by Lewis to all locals last night.

So the government stayed its hand for the present. It can seek contempt action against the 370,000 soft coal workers for striking last Monday in definance of a federal court's stop-strike order. This might end in another huge fine on the union's treasury.

Coal Gets Lower

Instead, the White House chose to see whether Monday will bring resumed production to build up the nation's fast-dwindling coal reserves, now down to critical ten-day average supply.

The National Coal Association said its telephones were buzzing with calls from mine operators reporting their employes won't be on the job Monday. The word has come from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Southern West Virginia, reported John D. Battle, NCA's executive director.

Cities and industries prepared for a longer siege. New York City prepared to dim a million bulbs on Broadway tomorrow night; under state rationing orders. As of Monday, all New Yorkers will meet a "certificate of necessity" to buy coal.

May Cut Production

The Ford Motor Company announced it probably will cut production unless the coal situation shows a major improvement this weekend. General Motors has cancelled all overtime schedules.

Federal officials privately agreed that drastic action could not be delayed many days longer. It is possible this may be sought on Monday, when Lewis and mine owners must appear for a hearing before Federal District Judge Richard B. Keech.

At that hearing Keech will decide whether to change his week-old temporary order into an 80-day "national emergency" injunction under the Taft-Hartley act.

Seizure Seems Remote

The White House ruled out one other possibility—a message to Congress asking authority to seize the coal mines. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman has no intention of asking seizure powers.

So the biggest news in Washington was the news from the coal fields. It was almost all bad, from the government's standpoint.

Eight hundred of the 1,500 members of the Robena local at Masontown, Pa., sat silently while an officer read Lewis' plea that they return to work "for the welfare of the union." Then the miners were told:

"The men that want to go back to work stand up."

Only two men rose to their feet.

Other locals were meeting and voting all over the country. The first two to assemble heard the Lewis telegram, then marched out without voting. These were at Colver and Johnstown, Pa., and have 1,300 members. Their action meant: No work for them Monday.

Some scattered districts, including the state of Washington and the Oklahoma-Arkansas area, thought it possible that digging will resume. There was even a chance that the movement might become general.

But the views of some local and district UMW officials ran like this:

"The men are fed up with orders to go back to work"—West Virginia.

"The miners are still madder than hell. They still want a contract." — Kentucky.

David L. Cole, chairman of Mr. Truman's board of inquiry, was more optimistic. He and the two other board members, along with Mediation Director Cyrus Ching and Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman, reported to Mr. Truman today.

Two Speakers For Teachers Association

Talks On Book Program And On M. S. T. A. Activities

About 75 teachers and guests attended the Pettis County Teachers Association meeting held in the assembly room of the court house, Saturday morning, at which time they gave various reports and announcements, and heard two interesting talks given by Miss Flavel Barnes of New York City, advisor of the UNESCO-CARE Book Program, and by Gordon R. Renfrow, Missouri State Teachers Association.

Miss Barnes, speaking on "UNESCO Book Program In War-Devastated Countries," said, "There are hungry minds, as well as hungry bodies, overseas. That was what she stressed to help rebuild war-wrecked libraries with gifts of new scientific and technical books. Miss Barnes was in this city to enlist public support for the plan, which the Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, added to its food and textile package service recently.

Help In Understanding

"By channelling food for the mind, as well as food for the body, to the people of Europe and Asia," Miss Barnes declared, "Americans can help nourish the understanding and recovery which is our best hope for world peace."

"Through books, we in America can feed hungry minds overseas. Money donated to the CARE-UNESCO Book Program will provide teachers and students with the books which are the basic tools of education. It will give farmers the know-how of new agricultural methods that can increase food supplies. It will give engineers the facts they need to rebuild devastated cities and factories. It will bring doctors up-to-date on new medical research that will help build sound bodies and minds. In all of this, we will be making a real contribution to the kind of reconstruction that helps people to help themselves.

Losses In Wartime

The need for books abroad, Miss Barnes stated, had its be-

Optimist Club Night Meeting

The Sedalia Optimist club will dispense with its regular noon luncheon next Tuesday and instead will have a night dinner meeting with the program in charge of a group of members of the Kansas City club. The principal speaker will be James W. Whitsitt, who is owner of the Purity Textiles Co., of Kansas City. Mr. Whitsitt has been a member of the Optimist club of his residence since 1938. He is a past president of the organization and has served as lieutenant governor of the district, was a member of the International Redistricting committee and at present is a member of the International Extension committee. He is noted for his work with boys and was recently honored by having named after him the Jim Whitsitt Junior Optimist club of Kansas City. Those who have had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Whitsitt speak know that he is a forceful speaker and his addresses are always full of humor and enthusiasm.

Mr. Whitsitt will be introduced by Walter E. Staley, who with Mr. Whitsitt attended the Optimist International convention at San Francisco in 1948.

Guilty Plea As Spy Made By Vogeler

"Mild Sentence" Is Asked By American At Budapest

By Endre Marton

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 18 (AP)—American businessman Robert A. Vogeler calmly told a people's court today he was a professional spy and asked for a "mild sentence."

Pleading guilty on all counts, the 38-year-old vice president of International Telephone and Telegraph Company testified he had been instructed to obtain special information about radar, rockets, uranium and oil deposits and to contact experts on atomic energy and help them escape from Hungary.

He said a Dr. Edsler, whom he identified as an Austrian atom expert, had been smuggled out of Austria, apparently with the help of the American office of director of intelligence (ODI) in Vienna.

"I used my business activities only as cover for my espionage work," he testified.

Three Others Guilty

These were the highlights of a court session at which three Hungarians, the last defendants in the trial, also pleaded guilty to sabotage and espionage. They were Edina Doery, a hotel barmaid and telephone operator listed as "baroness"; Klemen Demokos, chief accountant for the Standard Electric Company, Hungarian subsidiary of I. T. & T., and the Rev. Istvan Justh, a Roman Catholic priest.

Three other defendants pleaded guilty yesterday. They were Vogeler's British assistant, Edgar Sanders, and two Hungarians, Imre Geiger, director of the Hungarian company, and Zoltan Rado, a section chief of the Hungarian ministry of heavy trade.

(In Vienna, Vogeler's Belgian-born wife said: "It is obvious to anyone who knew Bob at all that he has been drugged or subjected to some kind of torture to make him say all these things. I don't know whether the torture was mental or physical—but they have certainly done something underhanded during the last three months."

(Similar expressions of disbelief in this confession came from U. S. state department officials and his business associates. Col. Sosthenes Behn, chairman of I. T. & T., in New York, said dates and alleged activities mentioned in the Vogeler confession were "at variance with the known facts.")

Self - possessed and speaking without a show of emotion or strain from his incommunicado imprisonment since Nov. 18, Vogeler answered with a simple "yes" this question: "Were you a trained specialist intelligence officer of the United States Army?"

Clinton Child Killed In Auto Accident

HARRISONVILLE, Mo., Feb. 18—(AP)—Ronald Owen, Jr., 6, of Clinton, Mo., was killed and his parents were injured severely in an automobile accident southeast of here on state highway No. 35 today.

The father, Ronald Owen, was taken to a hospital here. Attendants said he may have suffered a skull fracture. The mother, Mrs. Ruth Owen, was taken to a Kansas City hospital. She suffered arm and leg fractures and a fractured pelvis. Her condition was reported critical.

Jay Lee Bearly, 28, of Clinton, driver of another car involved in the accident, was not injured.

Seven Sedalias In Nation, How Three Got Their Names

As most people know in this community the name Sedalia came from a pet name that was given to George R. Smith's daughter Sed, (Sarah). It was first Sedville, then Sedalia. Now there are six other towns over the nation with the same name, Sedalia.

The others however are not as large as our city. The population of the other communities is as follows: Sedalia, Colo., 241; Sedalia, Ind., 424; Sedalia, Ky., 191; Sedalia, N. C., 25; Sedalia, Ohio, 317; Sedalia, S. C., 29. These figures are in part from the United States Official Postal Guide. The recent figures are probably increased considerably at the present time.

Sometime ago letters were sent from the Democrat-Capital with the intention of getting the original source of the seven Sedalia's names. The letters were addressed to the postmasters in the various towns. At the present time two letters have been received.

Charles P. Stewart, postmaster of Sedalia, Colo. sent the following:

"Dear Sir: In regard to the information you asked for as to how Sedalia, Colo., was named.

"The first name of the community was Round Corral. This was about 1855. The name then changed to Plum in 1865. Then about ten years later an early settler whose name was H. M. Clay, originally from Sedalia, Mo., laid out the town site as it is now. A name was voted on and Mr. Clay, selected the name of Sedalia."

Mr. Stewart says his community is located on highways 85 and 87 about 25 miles south of Denver. Cattle Ranching is the principal occupation.

Sedalia, Indiana

The second postmaster heard from was H. O. Duddleson of Sedalia, Ind. His story was not connected to Sedalia, Mo., in any way but was very interesting.

He said. "The local story as to the origin of the name Sedalia is as follows. When the railroad was built through here in 1870 or '71 this was a wood station. The first of each month was pay day for the wood workers and railroad men. The agent for the railro,d was named Dailey. It bemame the custom for the people railroad was named Dailey. It month to get paid for their wood and cross ties. Thus "See Daliey" became Sedalia. It is located on the junction state road and the Penn lines from Chicago and Louisville. The original railroad was called the South Bend Logansport and Terre Haunte Railroad.

The four other Sedalias are yet to be heard form. When the information of their naming comes into this office it will be published.

Is On Hot Spot Due Surpluses

Farm Leaders Are Fearful Of Cut In Price Support

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—The government's multi-billion dollar farm price support program is being put on a hot spot by troublesome surpluses.

The Irish potato—which has cost Uncle Sam upward of $500,000,000 in five years of price supports—has done much to focus public attention on the vast program.

Farm leaders are fearful that the highly-publicized dumping of spuds and efforts to give away dried eggs and milk will result in consumer and taxpayer demands that the whole support program be trimmed sharply, if not abandoned.

These leaders say that without an adequate support program farmers would suffer a depression which would engulf the nation.

Nevertheless, farm spokesmen agree that the potato surplus spectacle is one the public will not long tolerate. Evidence of this is shown in current congressional efforts to tighten farm legislation so that new curbs on potato production may be invoked.

The potato issue hits the publick's pocketbook in two ways. It takes tax dollars to buy up and dump unneeded surpluses. In doing this, it holds consumer prices higher than their natural levels.

Possible Added Surplus

The big thing that worries farm leaders in and out of the government is the very strong possibility that there will be additional surplus developments that will stir up overwhelming public resentment against the farm program.

In the first place, it is possible that another surplus of potatoes may be grown this year. In fact, the government already is buying early-grown 1950 crop spuds to carry out price agreements. Even if congress passes rigid control legislation to cover this year's

Skipper Felt 'Utterly Alone'

Testified As To "Distrust Of The Mo. Navigator"

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 18—(AP)—The skipper of the battleship Missouri said today he felt he was "utterly alone as far as assistance from my team of officers was concerned" the day the vessel ran aground.

Opening his defense before a naval court of inquiry investigating the grounding of the big Mo January 17 in Chesapeake Bay, Capt. William D. Brown also testified that:

1. He had developed a "distrust" of the navigator, Lt. Comdr. Frank G. Morris, because of Morris' performance on a trial run the ship made in December and because Morris made no previous recommendations before his "agitated" instructions the day the vessel grounded.

2. He "leaned heavily" on the recommendations of his operations officer, Comdr. John R. Millett, because of his "obviously more level head and greater experience."

3. He was piloting the ship toward two shallow water spar buoys in the mistaken belief they were part of the system marking a secret electronic range the ship was trying to run. The buoys, he learned later, were not those he had assumed them to be.

Before adjourning until Monday morning at the conclusion of the skipper's testimony under the direct examination of his own counsel, the court:

1. Withdrew and order "struck from the records" an expression of doubt put forth last week as to the competence of Ens. Elwin R. Harris, the big Mo's assistant navigator, as a witness and as an officer.

2. Advised Harris, who was plotting the Missouri's position the day she grounded, that his status as "an interested party" would be continued so he might remain in the courtroom during the proceedings.

Convinced It Take Time To Reach Accord

Not Anxious To Force Atom Issue With Russia Now

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson are reported convinced that the West may eventually arrive at a peaceful settlement with Russia—but only under conditions which may require years to establish.

Persons intimately familiar with the views of the two men said today the most important of these conditions are to show steel-nerve steadiness in dealing with the Kremlin, to tighten economic, military and political coperation of the Western powers, and to get a kind of total cold war policy for the United States—which Acheson believes this nation now lacks.

Acheson himself is considering making a major speech on foreign policy, and particularly Russian relations, within two or three weeks. It would expand his news conference statement of last week in which he outlined the policy of matching American power against Russian power where possible until world conditions are finally brought into balance.

Not Force Issue

One major consideration of the U. S. leaders is to avoid deliberately forcing the issue with Russia at this time on atomic energy or similar great questions. Their advisers feel that a western peace mission to Moscow, for example, would have a disastrous impact on an uneasy world if it failed, and they believe that at this time it would fail.

In general this adds up to following a narrow course between the dangers of a shooting war on one hand and appeasement on the other.

Acheson's projected speech may disclose officially what some of his most responsible aids now believe: That the cold war is going to continue for a long time and that no one now can prophesy accurately whether it will end in an atomic conflict or in restoration of tranquility around the world.

Administration policy makers meanwhile have displayed no intention of acting on suggestions from Winston Churchill and various U. S. senators for some dramatic new attempt to make peace with the Russians.

Blame On Russia

LONDON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Prime Minister Clement Attlee tonight laid full blame on Russia for continuance of the cold war.

If Russia had accepted western proposals for the control of atomic energy, he said, "this cloud of fear would have been lifted from the peoples, but Russia would not accept."

The difficulty in effecting a settlement of international friction, the prime minister said in reply to Winston Churchill's plea for a new effort to bridge the East-West gulf, "does not lie in the method nor in the choice of persons to discuss these high matters. All that is required is the will."

Attlee delivered the Labor party's last radio broadcast before the general election Thursday.

He expressd the willingness of the western nations to discuss atomic and other "high matters" with the Russians.

Lord Beaverbrook asserted today Winston Churchill can end the atomic armaments race between the east and west because he enjoys the respect and regard of Joseph Stalin.

Committee Assails Auto Club Tactics

Roads Group In Denial Of Reports As To Gas Tax

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 18—(AP)—The Missouri Automobile Club was accused today of wanton and deliberate betrayal of its own members in its efforts to defeat Gov. Forrest Smith's gas tax increase law.

The charge came from the Better Roads Committee, the new organization that is leading the campaign for referendum approval of the tax hike. The law, to double Missouri's two cent gas tax, is scheduled for a special election test April 4.

The public statement charged that the automobile club management is "fronting for the oil companies and the bus and truck association of Missouri. These selfish interests are trying to block this state's highway development program and stall Missouri's progress and prosperity for their own private gain.

"The tactics being used by the Automobile Club of Missouri are despicable and contemptible," the statement said. It declared the members of the club weren't even polled as to their individual feelings about the proposed tax hike before the club came out with its policy against the hike.

"Haven't the members of the club any rights?" it asked.

"The members of the Automobile Club are entitled to know about the management's deceitful actions and its methods of disservice to them. The club management's propaganda trick—that of repeating falsehoods until the people believe them—is an old one. In Missouri such worn out tactics will not fool the people."

Complaints are Reported

The statement said members of the club have written or telephoned the Better Roads Committee to complain about practices being followed by the club's management.

The committee statement said:

1. The Club's claim that state highway funds will be turned over to political county courts is untrue. "The new law contains no such provision. The bipartisan (highway) commission will retain complete control and supervisory powers as now provided for in the state's constitution."

2. The cities will benefit along with rural areas if the tax increase is approved, despite the Automobile Club's alleged declaration to the contrary.

The committee statement said the Automobile Club was just trying to separate "the existing friendships between the city folks and their rural neighbors."

"The proposed new law specially provides revenue which will insure a state - federal $37,500,000 road improvement program. This program will help the people in the mud-bound areas of the state and it will help the people in the metropolitan counties."

The committee said there was no truth in the club's assertion that St. Louis will lose its city gasoline tax if the new law is approved. St. Louis and Kansas City, the committee asserted, will get millions of dollars worth of urban highway improvements if the tax hike is passed.

Brings a Reply

In St. Louis, Gus Vahlkamp, secretary and general counsel of the Automobile Club, replied that the board of directors of the club "acts in the best interest of the state and the club's members and does not front for oil companies or anyone else."

Vahlkamp said: "Our members have indicated in letters to the club that they are overwhelmingly in favor of the auto club's stand (opposing the gas tax)."

Dead Due Collision Reach 29

Injured 105 On Long Island—One Motorman Is Under Arrest

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N Y., Feb. 18—(AP)—Federal, state and county authorities teamed today to investigate the collision of two Long Island commuter trains in which 29 persons died and 105 were injured.

Nassau County District Attorney Frank A. Gulotta summoned trustees of the bankrupt Long Island Railroad to an inquest into the accident which occurred when an east bound train roared through a red signal light into another passenger train.

Twelve trainmen and officials of the railroad were called to county police headquarters by Police inspector Stuyvesant Pinnel.

Public Service Commissioner George A. Arkwright said a formal hearing would be held Feb. 22 at the Jamaica station of the railroad. He and a representative of the Interstate Commerce Commission will preside.

Meanwhile, service was restored to normal almost 12 hours after the shash-up occurred at 10:36 p. m. Friday.

Three hospitals sent out calls for blood plasma as supplies ran low.

All but two of those who rode to death in the front cars of the two trains were men.

This was attributed to the fact that the cars were smokers.

(In another railroad accident near Gulfport, Miss., today, 17 persons were injured but there were no deaths. Twelve cars of the Louisville and Nashville railroad's Pan American left the tracks, apparently because of a broken rail.)

The Long Island collision occurred on a makeshift "gantlet" or "frog" siding, put down during temporary repair work on the main roadbed of the commuter railroad.

Jacob Kiefer, 55, of Baldwin, N. Y., motorman of the east bound train that went through the stop signal, was charged with second degree manslaughter. He suffered a possible brain concussion.

Nassau county district attorney Frank A. Gulotta said Kiefer would be arraigned Monday morning in first district court at Mineola, N. Y.

Gulotta said no criminal action was contemplated against the motorman of the other train, J. W. Markin who was sent home suffering from shock.

"Ran a Red Light"

Kiefer's 12-car train, carrying about 800 persons home from an evening in Manhattan, plowed into the westbound train at 10:36 p. m. (EST).

Both the railroad and police said Kiefer went through a red light.

Gulotta said tonight he had information that Kiefer took his train through two red signals before the crash.

The attorney said there was no defect in mechanical operation.

For hours, police and wrecking crews toiled frantically through the twisted, blood-drenched wreckage. Acetylene torches bit at the crumpled mass of steel from which came screams of the injured, trapped inside.

The dead, dying and injured were piled five deep in the two forward cars of the train. The cars were sheared in half by the terrific impact.

Operate Under Wreckage

Surgeons and internes wriggled beneath the tons of crumpled metal. They hacked and sawed off mangled legs and arms of some of the injured to free them.

Every available doctor and nurse from neighboring towns was called to the scene.

One eye-witness, 21-year-old college student, Paul Back, said, "There was a tremendous shock. My head hit the wall and the

Probe For Normal To Solve Adolescent Puzzle

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 —(AP)— What is it like to be a bobby-soxer, a teenager, or 10-year-old boy?

A new adolescent clinic here is trying to find out. It is trying to learn what is normal or average in the physical and emotional growth, needs and problems of humans crossing the no-man's-land between being a child and being an adult.

The clinic has just started in a small way at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. A few adolescents come in on Friday afternoons for physical check-ups or treatments, and a talk with one of four doctors. Dr. Mary E. Mercer, assistant professor of pediatrics in psychiatry, is supervisor.

"We know something about the normal growth of infants and young children," she explained. "Now we believe that pediatricians and other doctors should know more about what is normal or average during adolescence."

Adolescence Age

Adolescence covers the ages usually between 10 and 11 on up to 15 or 16.

"It's a time of rapid physical and emotional growth and changes," Dr. Mercer said. "It is often a hard, upsetting and puzzling time for boys and girls, and also for parents.

"Children or their parents may worry whether they are growing all right, whether they're getting too tall or fat. Or the adolescent may have troublesome skin disorders or mild chronic diseases."

Adolescence often is marked by fast and wide emotional swings. attempts to set up mora or practical values, by concern with sex, by many emotional problems that the child is not yet able to solve or handle.

Need Reassurance

"They often need extra reassurance that their problems are normal, and that other adolescents share the same doubts and fears," Dr. Mercer said.

"It is at this age that the child begins to struggle against his parents. He wants to become independent, to be recognized as an individual person. He needs help not only to gain freedom but to assume responsibility for it. This is the beginning of emotional maturity."

The adolescent, she says, "needs help in becoming independent, and in understanding that independence can't come all at once. Sometimes the parents need help, too. In many families, the handling of the adolescent child is too much a 'do this or else' proposition. There isn't enough compromise."

Started Clinic

The hospital started an adolescent clinic to treat these youngsters a year ago but when word of it got around, social organizations began sending many badly adjusted adolescents to it, and the clinic was swamped by youngsters who should have been sent to a psychiatric clinic.

As reorganized now, the clinic, part of the Institute of Child Development, is intended mainly to teach pediatricians about "normal" adolescents. Its findings may later be made available to other doctors, parents, teachers, and groups dealing with adolescents.

Kaiser-Fraiser Reveals First Details of New Low-Priced Automobile

WILLOW RUN, Mich., Feb. 18—Kaiser-Frazer Corp., is announcing its low-priced car—a standard two-door sedan designed to introduce a new "low low-priced" market in the automobile industry.

First details of the new automobile, which will go into production at the K-F Willow Run plant on June 30, were made public today in an announcement which said the new car will deliver gasoline mileage upward from 30 to 35 miles per gallon.

Streamlined and attractively styled, the automobile will be shown publicly for the first time at the Chicago Auto Show, February 18 to 26.

With a low, sleek silhouette the new car has a big interior with full five-passenger seating room and a new-type luggage carrying arrangement which provides a cargo capacity more than double that of the largest conventional sedan trunks.

The two-door sedan will be offered in DeLuxe and Standard models with a customer's choice of two new Kaiser "Supersonic" engines, a four and a six, both engineered for high performance efficiency with economical operation and maintenance.

Henry J. Kaiser, chairman of the board, said that the new automobile was designed and engineered against a background of seven years of low-priced car study, and the construction of many experimental models.

"Our goal," he said, "has been to achieve the best combination of automobile performance, styling and economy of operation. This we feel we have accomplished with a price which will be within the budget of millions who have never been able to afford the purchase of a new automobile."

The new standard-tread car, he said, features "outstanding maneuverability in traffic and exceptional roadability on high-speed highways."

An outstanding safety factor is the large expanse of safety glass throughout, particularly in the windshield.

The need for stowing packages and luggage in a trunk which can be reached only from outside the car has been eliminated in the new automobile by a folding rear seat arrangement.

With the rear seat upright for passenger use, there is well over 20 cubic feet of space for luggage. With the seat folded down, the carga space increases to 55 cubic feet—double that of the largest sedan trunks.

Overall interior space provides plenty of leg room for six-footers.

The new car is yet un-named. A panel of judges is now going over more than 400,000 entries in the company's nationwide "Name-the-Car" contest which closed last month The panel's choice will be disclosed at a later date, together with additional detailed descriptions of the new car

Grant Rate Boost To 'Phone Company

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 18—(AP)—The Missouri Public Service Commission allowed a $9,500 a year rate increase for the Eldorado Springs telephone compan Friday.

The company sought a boost of $10,525 a year to help meet wage costs under the new federal 75 cent an hour minimum wage law. That would have produced a net return of 7.56 per cent on the company's investment.

But the PSC said that was too much. Instead it allowed rates estimated to produce 6.33 per cent a year.

Dr. Sander To Trial Monday

"Mercy" Death Case Has Aroused World Wide Interest

MANCHESTER, N.H., Feb. 18—(AP)—Did Dr. Hermann N. Sander commit murder by an "act of mercy"—hastening the death of a cancer-ridden patient?

The State of New Hampshire brings him to trial Monday on that charge and a jury of New Hampshire citizens must decide the answer—while a whole world waits.

International attention is focussed on the 41-year-old country physician and on the state's indictment:

That he wilfully injected 40 cubic centimeters of air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59, "well knowing the said air injection to be sufficient to cause death."

County authorities have quoted the slender, mustached doctor as saying it was an act of mercy—that the woman's death was only a few hours away.

In his only public comment, Dr. Sander said: "I am not guilty of a legal or moral wrong. Ultimately my position will be vindicated."

The Uuthanasia Society of America is keenly interested in the trial. It believes "mercy killings" should be legalized. A society spokeman said: "This is absolutely the best case yet for our cause. It is good because of the doctor's integrity, and because he didn't hide what he did."

From far off Rome a different viewpoint. O'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, cited the fifth commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," in condemning a mercy slaying) changes his mission to an inhumane one of giving death."

There is the possibility, however, the euthanasia issue (mercy killing) might play al less prominent role if the physician does not take the stand.

Death Recorded by Cancer

The medical record of Mrs. Borroto's death last Dec. 4 contained the notation that air had been injected into her veins. But it gave the cause of death as cancer of the large bowel.

Mrs. Borroto, ill for some three months, had wasted from 140 to 80 pounds. She left her husband, Reginald F., a Manchester oil salesman, and a daughter, Elsie, 19.

The scene of the trial is the red brick, 45-year-old Hillsboro county courthouse just off Elm street—the main thoroughfare of New Hampshire's largest city.

Judge Harold E. Wescott will preside as selection of a jury gets underway Monday morning.

The regular list of 42 prospective jurors drawn for the present court term has been augmented by 120 more veniremen. There are several women in the group.

The state's prosecutor is William L. Phinney, a rugged former G-man who has known Dr. Sander many years.

Chief defense counsel is Louis E. Wyman, a white-haired member of the bar for nearly a half century.

The maximum The maximum The maximum penalty for murder in New Hampshire is death by hanging. The jury can, however, recommend life imprisonment in returning a guilty verdict.

ginnings in the wartime losses: First, through the book-burnings and confiscations carried on by the Nazis, and later through the bombings that gutted schools and libraries.

Education institutions in France, for instance, she cited, lost a total of two and a half million volumes. The University of Vienna lost 150,000 books. At the British Museum Library, London, 250,000 books were lost. The library of the Institute of Agriculture and Forestry in Prague, Czechoslovakia, lost 18,000 of a prewar 20,000 books. In the Philippines, an estimated five million books were lost.

The book plan, as outlined by Miss Barnes, works this way:

CARE and UNESCO representatives abroad obtain lists of book needs, in specified categories, from libraries, universities, technical schools and research centers. With the funds donated by Americans, CARE then fills those needs as closely as possible by buying the latest and best books published in English.

Tells Of State Body

Mr. Renfrow began his talk with a brief history of the Missouri State Teachers Association, and said a group of forward-looking educators met in St. Louis in 1856, with Horace Mann, an early leader in the educational profession. They set up four major needs of Missouri teachers namely: inservice training for teachers, normal schools to educate for the teaching profession, a professional magazine for exchange of ideas, and a state professional association. These needs have largely been met, the speaker said.

Mr. Renfrow related that among the current activities of the M. S. T. A. are the publishing of professional bulletins and pamphlets, research work having as its object increased support of schools and the state educational program, and recruitment of new teachers. Mr. Renfrow stated that during the next sixteen years America would need one million new teachers, ten thousand new elementary principals, five thousand new high school principals, five thousand new town and city superintendents, two thousand new county superintendents and one thousand new college professors.

Talk Is Illustrated

Following his address, Mr. Renfrow showed colored slides which illustrated activities of the state teachers association in its building at Columbia, and also a series of slides showing buildings, sports, and scenic surroundings at Bunker Hill Ranch, the 2080 acre resort deeded to the teachers of Missouri by the late E. T. Behrens, a former Sedalian.

The meeting was called to order Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Imogene Peoples. C. F. Scotten, county superintendent, made some announcements.

Miss Marjorie Rector, secretary, gave a brief talk on the 1950-51 teachers requirements.

Reports of the study group activities were given by G. D. Corwine, Mrs. Evelyn Rabourn, Mrs. Charles Guier, Mrs. Vaughn White, Mrs. Donald Donath and Miss Dora E. Benz.

The second guest speaker, Mr. Renfrow was introduced by Mrs. Peoples. At 11:45 a. m., Mr. Scotten gave a summary of classification of schools.

Will Of G. N. Puntney Filed

The will of the late Grant N. Puntney, who died February 11, which was made June 1, 1949, was filed in the probate court of Judge A. M. Harlan. His niece, Mrs. Marie B. Wasson, rural route four, was named as executrix of the estate.

James Durley is attorney for the estate.

Woodland Hospital Notes

Dismissed: Mrs. Ernst Koeller, 2240 East Twelfth street.

Second, the government has accumulated more than $100,000,000 worth of surplus eggs and dried milk, which it is trying to give away for relief use; and about $50,000,000 worth of butter. Even larger purchases of dairy products may be necessary this year.

Third, there is the possibility that the government may have to buy large quantities of pork this year to support hog prices. This would be taking supplies of meat away from consumers—with their tax dollars—at a time when the government is saying the people need more meat.

In the fourth place, there is serious doubt that production controls on this year's crops of cotton, wheat, corn and peanuts will be effective in preventing accumulation of additional surpluses—which the government would be obliged under the law to buy and take off the market.

All in all, the government may have more than $6,000,000,000 tied up in surpluses a year from now. Its post-war losses on perishable products may total upwards of $1,000,000,000.

Aggravating future prospects for continued public support of farm programs are such developments as a rising public debt, government pleading for higher taxes, and heavy expenditures for national defense.

There is growing feeling among farm leaders that agricultural programs need to be overhauled. But they are miles apart on what should be done. An inability to get together on a program that would eliminate some of the unpopular features of the present setup could play into the hands of those demanding an end to price supports.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan says that "present support legislation is not doing the job of protecting farm income that needs to be done—if this nation is to maintain prosperity."

The administration wants to replace present laws with the controversial Brannan plan. This would, on the whole, support prices at higher levels than now. Also it would radically alter the method of supporting prices of perishables.

Aly Khan Is Injured Skiing

GSTAAD, Switzerland, Feb. 18—(AP)—Prince Aly Khan broke his right leg in three places today in a skiing accident that his trainer blamed on another skier.

The 38-year-old prince, husband of film actress Rita Hayworth, crossed his skis in a sharp left Christiania turn on the Wasserngrat run near Gstaad, turned two somersaults and fell hard. All the breaks were below the knee.

"It is one of the worst fractures I have ever seen in a skiing accident," said Dr. Fritz Haufman, the attending physician. "He may not be able to walk for three months."

Rita rushed to Aly's bedside at a hospital in nearby Saanen. She had been visiting friends in Lausanne. Dr. Hauffman said the leg would have to remain in a pulley extension at least three weeks.

Aly's trainer, Maurice Moratti, said Aly attempted the turn to avoid a skiier crossing the track in front of him and was thrown by the ruts in the snow.

"I got up and walked toward the exit door and heard screams for help. One man screaming 'Kill me, please kill me.' He thought his back was broken.

The splintering crash as the steel cars met was followed by screams of the injured from deep inside the twisted wreckage.

One woman, her left arm dangling by a tendon, shrieked: "My arm, my arm, I've lost my arm."

A man was trapped so hopelessly it was necessary that a surgeon amputate both legs. The man begged rescuers "to tell my wife I'm all right." He died on the way to a hospital.

Thousands of curious, as many as 30,000 at one time, ringed the scene. Some helped out the injured. Others only hampered rescue efforts.

At first the dead were placed on the lawn of a little Negro church nearby. As the toll mounted, the church was pressed into service as a morgue and the bodies moved inside.

Rockville Centre is 21 miles from New York City. The railroad, a major commuting link between Long Island and New York, is bankrupt and now is operated by court-appointed trustees.

It was the road's second fatal crash in less than two months. Two crewmen were killed and six injured when one train crashed into the rear of another in New York City Dec. 22. No passengers were aboard those trains.

The accident was the worst in the metropolitan New York area and the nation's worst since 45 persons died April 25, 1946 at Naperville, Ill.

Navy Veteran Victim

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—(AP)—John M. Weeks, a contributing editor of Time magazine, was one of the 29 persons killed in last night's crash of two Long Island Railroad trains.

Weeks, 30 years old, was a former newspaperman and a navy veteran of World War two.

Homeless In Floods 35,000

By The Associated Press

A cold wave and blizzards knifed across the north central part of the country Saturday, but clear skies cheered thousands of flood refugees in the south.

Another mass of cold air harrassed the southeast, bringing freezing temperatures to parts of northern Florida.

As the cold wave whistled into Montana and the Dakotas, temperatures plummeted 20 to 35 degrees. Icy winds kicked up local blizzard conditions in the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Much colder weather was forecast for most of the midwest as the cold air spread south and eastward. Wisconsin and upper Michigan braced for an expected cold wave.

Suffering mounted in the south, despite clear skies. Increases of overloaded tributaries of the Mississippi contained to rise from earlier rains and backwaters flooded more farm land.

Hardest hit are Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas. Some 35,000 persons are homeless in these states and Missouri and Kentucky and the number is expected to grow.

In Louisiana and Mississippi, where 8,000 already are homeless, flood waters are expected to rise at least until March 1. There were few indications backwaters would recede until late March.

"I told President Truman I would not defend Acheson if the matter comes up on the Senate floor," the senate majority leader said.

"Acheson got emotional," Lucas said. "But I don't think it will become a campaign issue—not a big one anyway."

Winds And Snow Hamper Search

Eleven men of the 17 who jumped from the ill-fated bomber have been flown to the United States. A 12th, Lieut. Charles G. Pooler, Deloit, Kas., is awaiting air transportation to McChord Air Force Base near Tacoma, Wash., as soon as the weather lets planes take off in the stormy area.

Search operations are being directed by the Canadian destroyer Cayuga, which is lying offshore with four American Coast Guard cutters. They were buffeted by 10-foot waves in today's storm.

Boyle's Column

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Feb. 19 —(AP)— Writing a column for the newspapers is getting to be downright perilous.

Our windy Mount Olympus is under siege. The readers are fighting back.

It used to be a columnist didn't know where his next chunk of caviar was coming from. Now he doesn't know whence the next brick is going to be flung at him. But he feels sure there won't be a hamburger tied to it.

Latest case in point is actress Joan Bennett's Valentine gift of a deodorized skunk to columnist Hedda Hopper, who heralds happenings in Hollywood. Taking this gesture as a criticism of her literary efforts, the lady columnist gave the woods pussy to a cat-fancier, murmuring on the "great affinity between cats and skunks."

A Place for It

Personally, if anyone shipped me a sanitary skunk I'd have kept him and put him to work. I'd tie him to my desk to scare away press agents. Often these disparaging presents sent to a columnist by his riled readers can be used to further his career.

Once a stranger sent me a reddish blue glass eye, and I have found it highly useful. When the receptionist phones in to say, "there's a man out here mad at something you wrote," I tell her, "show him in." Then I quickly tape the glass eye onto the middle of my forehead.

When I look up and say, "yes, what is it, fellows?" the man takes one gander, wipes his face with his handkerchief, and walks away. He feels, I hope, that anyone with three eyes can't be blamed too much for anything he does.

A Bad Precedent

What worries me about the Hollywood skunk Valentine episode is that it sets a bad precedent. What if I unknowingly wrote something that peeved John D. Rockefeller, Jr.? I might open my door some morning and find a whole herd of white elephants tied to it. This would be hard to explain to my apartment house-manager, as he doesn't even allow eagles or small dogs in the place.

From now on no columnist can feel safe from the "indignant subscriber." The world is full of animals from bettles to buffaloes and the columnist who wittingly or unwittingly offends his readers may shortly find his home has become an annex to the zoo.

It is easy to say, "well, don't write things that annoy people." But just try writing a column yourself and see how many days you can go without making someone angry. Anything you write can stir up reader wrath, even if you just say, "etaoin shrdlu, etaoin shrdlu." They get the idea you don't like foreigners.

To Attack Sin

My own lifelong policy has been to attack nothing but poison snakes and sin. But when I did criticize poison snakes in a friendly way recently, a naturalist wrote back: "Who are you to pick on poison snakes? The average poison snake destroys more vermin than you do, apeface!"

There you are. I still intend to attack sin one of these days. But sure as sin itself somebody'll write back and demand, "what are you trying to do—ruin my business?"

NEW YORK—(AP)—Being grown up isn't half the fun you thought it would be when young.

Every child dreams of the time when he will be as tall as the adults who tower above him, and have as big a voice, and money of his own in his pocket.

To him all grownups, even the kindest and most understanding, are jailors. An he bears for them the profound distrust that a small dog does for a large one; the feeling of a midget, who knows his own weakness, toward a giant who doesn't seem to know his own strength.

The attitude of a child to a grownup is a mixture of envy, frustration and admiration. And the thing he resents most is the fact he is so dependent upon him.

The trouble is they live in two separate worlds, and the bridge that connects them is a one-way path that the child must move along more slowly than he wants to.

A Complex World

To him his world is a highly complex one, full of doubts, fears and forbidden ecstasies—a world in which there are only a few things he can do and many things he can't. Naturally, then, to his eyes the adult world is a simple and desirable world. What problems could adults have? They can stay up as late as they like, go to a movie whenever they want to, and buy all the candy their big fat stomachs will hold.

What makes grownups so often act cross and irritable then? Why, they must be crazy. And I think every child is secretly convinced that every grownup really is touched in the head.

I can remember one of my father's friends saying to me once: "You don't know how lucky you are, boy. I only wish I was ten years old again."

Had Another Idea

And I can recall clearly my own thought:

"I wish you were, too—I'd kick you."

It is in adolescence, however, when the two worlds of boyhood and manhood begin to merge that the adult loses most of his standing with the young. The wonder and admiration have worn off.

The eyes of adolescence have a terrible and ruthless honesty. They see the grownup as a pitiful and pretentious tyrant, leaning on his authority to hide his own weaknesses. The youth has a two-way view then, and often he wonders if it wouldn't be better to crawl back into childhood than to become an adult like those he sees around him.

But the path is still one way. He has to go on, reluctantly or not. And once he does become a grownup he finds himself a prisoner in a new and strange jail. Why it isn't a simplething at all!

Not So Much Fun

He is tall now—but so are those around him. Sure, he can run fact—but there isn't anything to run for, unless he is a politician. Sure, he can buy all the ice cream cones he wants, but he only wants one, if any. And there are so many hard-to-get-hold things he never had to worry about as a child—a job, a wife, and new toys like automobiles.

Being an adult, knowing their problems, for the first time in his life he begins to pity them and himself for the spot they're in. When he has children he realizes he is not the jailor—not from his standpoint. He is their loving prisoner, who sometimes must hurt them while trying to help them. He hates to say "Don't" to them, but feels he has to.

No, being grownup isn't the fun a child thinks it is. It is just the dreams of childhood encased in a shell of duty and responsibility.

Second Grade Gives Program At Washington

Washington school Parent-Teacher Association met at the school at 2:45 o'clock Friday afternoon with Mrs. G. H. Abney, president, presiding over the business meeting.

Mrs. C. E. Van Horn gave the devotional in which she stressed the need for the return of faith. "Somewhere under an unknown teacher today is a child who will lead the world to peace," Mrs. Van Horn said, "And we must deepen our faith so we will meet the need of our youth."

The school program was presented by the second grade, taught by Miss Jessie White and Mrs. Doras Herndon.

A skit, "Door Bells and Book Houses" was given, showing how our friends can come through the covers of a book to visit us as well as through the doors of our house.

The second grade pupils sang two songs, one in honor of Abraham Lincoln and one on George Washington with the parents joining in to sing "America."

Mrs. Charles Griggs, Founders' Day chairman, read the names of the past presidents of the Washington P.T.A. and presented each one present with a yellow rose. She also read letters from several past presidents who could not attend.

A play, "A Woman's Privilege," was given by the Senior Girl Scouts, Troop No. 4, Smith-Cotton high school under the direction of Mrs. John Zulauf.

The meeting was followed by the Founders' Day tea.

School Nurse Makes Talk At Hubbard

Mrs. John Murrell, public school nurse, addressed the entire student body of Hubbard school, Friday, at the 11 o'clock assembly.

Some of the highlights of Mrs. Murrell's address were:

"Even though a person may have a brilliant mind and a healthy body—if he has an unpleasant personality he will be given a second place in life.

"The most important places for a child to learn to work is in the home and school. Be willing to do an assigned chore at home or school. This will help you when you enter your life's work as an adult.

"Students, lead a clean and healthy life. Avoid the pitfalls of adolescence. Choose your friends wisely. You are judged by the friends you keep. The friends you make during adolescence are the most important friends you will ever have. They will stay with you.

"Adolescens should not have too much freedom. It is during this time of life so many boys and girls make mistakes.

Be Proud of Your Race

"Students, do not feel or think that you are handicapped because of your race, creed, or color. Be proud of your race. Individuality is your birth-right. You have many outstanding people of your race to be proud of, namely: Lena Horn, Bill Robinson, Marion Anderson, Joe Louis, and many others. Time does not permit me to name them all.

"Above all, whatever job you have to do, do it better than anyone else. Be like Joe Louis—do your best—be your best. In his field, Joe Louis, is The Best, not because he was smart and did not listen to what his manager and trainer told him to do but because he wanted to do what was right and he wanted to do his job better than anyone else."

The entire student body was very attentive and were very much inspired by Mrs. Murrell's address.

Music for the program was furnished by the Hubbard school band, under the direction of Mr. Charles Moten.

J. B. Hylick, school principal, gave the closing remarks, thanking Mrs. Murrell for such a timely address. In his remarks he re-emphasized to the students the importance of making friends and keeping them—taking jobs and doing them beter than anybody else.

Mr. Hylick invited the public, through the students, to come down and observe, at any time, just how well the children are observing the Keep-Clean Campaign now in progress.

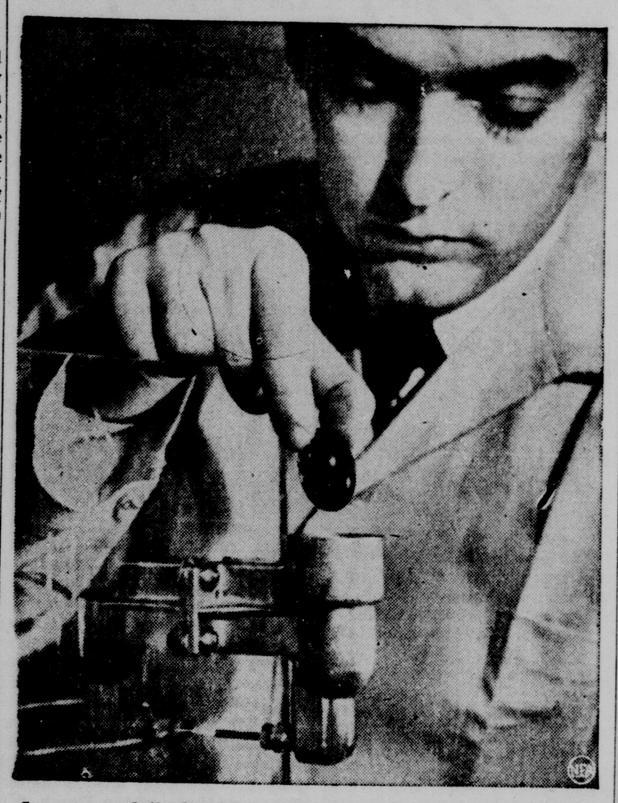
Auto a Dud? Feed it Vitamins



Is your car dull, sluggish, run down? Does it hate to get going on cold winter mornings? Maybe it can use a new one-a-morning "vitamin" capsule designed especially for moribund motors. Developed by a New Jersey oil company, it is fed to your engine through a special applicator installed on the dashboard. Engineers say it will start an engine running in less than 10 seconds at 40 degrees below zero.

Staff Brutality Is Eliminated

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 18—(AP)—"Staff brutality and a vicious system of inmate leadership" have been eliminated at the state training school for boys at Boonville, Francis Smith of St. Joseph reported here Friday.

Smith, chairman of the state board of training schools, made his report at a meeting of the board, summing up its activities since it took control in March, 1948.

He said brutality by staff members at all three state training schools is cause for immediate dismissal and has been eliminated.

Also eradicated, Smith said, was a "vicious system at Boonville of leadership invested in a few inmates, fostering vice and sex perversion which gave the boys an education in crime."

The board has discarded the old military system at the boys' school which was only "sham and false display" without any advantages of a real military system, Smith said.

The board invited a number of circuit court judges who handle juvenile cases in northwest Missouri to a meeting at Boonville March 24 for an inspection of the school.

Style Guide for today's woman

By Frances Sagaloff at Sage's

New dresses are coming in daily and they're pretty. Lots and lots of navy with two or three color trim—some have white collars and they are adorable. Nothing is more feminine than navy with white trim.

Start the season off by shortening your old skirts. Thirteen inches from the floor is suggested and although everyone can't wear that exact length, find your proper hemline and wear it now.

This is a good time to discuss hose. The new spring shades are here. I have found there are always three important shades each season and a few lesser ones. FAUN—a neutral sand shade for pale shades and black. CAPRICE—a medium taupe to wear with beige to brown and navy. BLUSH—the natural shade to wear with pastels, white and black. Now is the time to finish up with your winter shades and buy your new hose in the spring shades to fit your wardrobe.

Hargrove, 1701 South Prospect avenue, at 8:00 o'clock Tuesday night, at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding ceremony was read by the father of the bridegroom as the couple stood beneath an archway in the living room, which archway was in the shape of a large heart covered in red and trimmed with white flowers and lace.

The costume selected by the bride for her wedding was a suit of navy blue shade with which she bore navy accessories and her corsage was of white carnations.

Miss Joyce Ann Witcher, the bride's only attendant, was attired in a black suit with which she wore gray accessories and her corsage was of red carnations.

Mr. Kenneth Ditton served Mr. Hargrove as best man.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

The table was covered with a lace tablecloth and centered with a three-tier wedding cake on which was a miniature bride and bridegroom. The cake was placed on a large mirror and encircled with smilax and rosebuds. On either side were burning tapers in crystal holders around which was also smilax. Red and white crepe paper streamers on which were white bells and red hearts decorated the dining room.

The following were guests: Rev. L. B. Hargrove, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Gurney Morris, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Coats and daughter, Terry Ann, Mrs. Pat Pummill, Patty Wells, Gene May, Delores Pummill, Ruth Ford, Junior Hargrove, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Taylor.

Oriental Art Curator To Be Sorosis Guest

Miss Jeanne Harris, assistant to Laurence Sickman, curator of Oriental art at the Nelson Art Gallery in Kansas City, will be the speaker at Sorosis Monday afternoon at the Heard Memorial club house.

Miss Harris makes frequent use of her ability to read and speak Chinese in the research of all Chinese paintings and art objects and she hopes to supplement her skeleton vocabulary someday with a visit to China which has been her ambition since her graduation several years ago from Sweet Briar college, Lynchburg, Va. with a bachelor of arts degree. She has, however, been unable to make the trip because of the war.

With such a trip in mind she began the study of Oriental art as well as museum procedure. While a member of the staff at the Newark Museum, Newark, N. J., she was schooled in the various museum departments and her experience there proved valuable later at the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art where she spent the next few years. While in New York she decided to take her master's degree and she applied for admission to the Columbia university under the Chinese Cultural Fellowship program. She studied in the department of Chinese and Japanese for a year and it was there that she acquired the knowledge of Chinese languages. The following year the program was discontinued but she completed her master's degree.

The various duties of Miss Harris are exhibitions, both in and out of the gallery, the taking care of the collections, which requires storage, cleaning, and preservation, research work to place objects in their proper historical periods and checking their authenticity with reference to catalogs and with other well known pieces in similar style and the answering of many questions on privately owned works. There are also gallery tours for visitors given to groups by special appointment.

Miss Harris, who will be introduced by Mrs. T. W. Croxton, Art and Drama chairman, will bring with her films of oriental collections.

Newspaper Story Proves Age For Sedalia Woman

"(Editor's Note: All names, personal facts and other information about claimants under the social security act are, of course, confidential an dcannot be used except with the expressed permission of the persons involved. In this case Mrs. Mabel Cardwell of Sedalia, Mo., formerly of Quincy, has given the social security administration specific permission to use her name and other facts in the hope that this news story may be of value and interest to other social insurance claimants.)

"A newspaper story of the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago on Dec. 30, 1903, in which 600 persons lost their lives, has enabled Mrs. Mabel Cardwell of Sedalia, Mo., formerly of Quincy, to establish her correct age to qualify for social security insurance benefits.

"Ordinarily persons eligible for social security insurance benefits are able to prove their correct age without difficulty through other relatives, the family Bible or by other means.

"However, this was not possible in Mrs. Cardwell's case. She had no surviving relatives or childhood friends to testify to her age. Neither was there any insurance papers or a family Bible.

"In fact, for a time it seemed that Mrs. Caldwell wou'd be unable to qualify for the insurance benefits because of the lack of proof of her age.

"Then she recalled a story of the Iroquois theatere fire which had appeared in the old Quincy Herald which told of the death of her mother and also erroneously listed her among the victims. She also recalled her age was given as 23 years in the newspaper article.

"Social security officials at Sedalia communicated with Justin Wagy, manager of the Quincy field office, asking his assistance in verifying the age of Mrs. Cardwell. A search of the old files of the Quincy Herald by Mr. Wagy and LaVerne Bassinger of the local social security office staff brought to light the article recalled by Mrs. Cardwell.

"It developed that Mrs. Cardwell ,then Miss Mabel Evans, and her mother, Mrs. Margaret Evans, were in the Iroquois theatre in Chicago that afternoon when fire swept through the structure, causing the deaths of hundreds, many of whom were suffocated in their seats.

"Others were trampled to death or pinned under falling timbers and masonry. As the dead were removed from the ruins of the theater, bodies were carried into adjoining buildings and laid out in rows for identification.

"The body of Mrs. Evans was among those taken to an improvised morgue. Miss Evans also was taken to the morgue and was believed dead until a nurse examining the bodies found her to be still alive. When the newspaper article was written it was believed the daughter had also been a victim of the halocause and her name and age was listed among the dead.

"Thus the newspaper article had a strange but fortunate aftermath for Miss Evans. Following the fire Miss Evans returned to Quincy, but in the years that followed her father, Jack Evans, a railroad conductor, died and other relatives died or moved elsewhere. Miss Evans went to Sedalia, Mo., where she attended a business college, found employment and worked for several years until she married Thomas Cardwell.

"Recently Mrs. Cardwell became eligible for old age insurance benefits under the social security law, but it was necessary to prove her age. The newspaper story containing her age at the time of the Iroquois fire was sufficient proof for applying for her insurance claim."

White Breasted Robin Returns To Frank T. Johnson Home

Even if they looked half frozen and as if they wished they had waited awhile longer during those few cold days, the robin red breats are back in almost everybody's yard now, at least one or two of them, but Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Johnson, 1615 South Beacon avenue, think they have a robin of real distinction. Their robin has a white breast instead of a red breast and white wings —in fact, said Mrs. Johnson, it looks almost entirely white when it flies.

Early last spring the white breasted robin was noticed at the bird feeder in Johnson's yard and he stayed there until summer when the other robins had all come, then he disappeared. This year he is back again, all alone as he was last year, and is hopping around making himself at home.

Many save bread crumbs and various things to feed the birds, and one woman buys an extra loaf of bread in the winter time every week because she uses so much of her bread to feed the birds. They gather at her back door, about her breakfast time every morning and if she is a little late they begin in their chirping voices to tell her about it. She keeps a pan of water filled for them, too, and she was amused one of the cold mornings when the water had frozen in the pan to see a bluejay telling her off when he couldn't get a drink. He would peck on the ice, shake himself furiously and fuss in a loud, angry tone, finally he gave up and flew away.

Tall Gorillas Called Myth

PASADENA, Calif.—(AP)—David P. Willoughby was intrigued by tall tales told by African hunters about 9-foot gorillas that inhabited certain sections of the Belgian Congo. So the California Institute of Technology paleontologist went to work, measuring hundreds of gorilla bones, checking photographs and reports by expeditions.

His conclusion: Gorillas are no taller than people. In a report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science Willoughby said the tallest reliably reported height for a gorilla is 6 feet 2 inches, although the animals often weigh more than 500 pounds.

Marines Landed in Iwo Jima Just Five Years Ago

(The writer, Bill Ross, was a Marine combat correspondent who landed on Iwo Jima the first day of the battle.)

By Mill Ross

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Five years ago today a tiny Pacific island became forever a landmark in American history. It was the 19th of February, 1945, that the Marines landed at Iwo Jima.

Bald Mt. Suribachi—atop which was snapped the famous photograph—still dominates the scene today. Windswept beaches remain dotted with wrecked landing craft. Here and there you can spot what was a Japanese pillbox.

The rows of white crosses are still there, too.

But Iwo Jima—on D-Day plus five years—has settled into history. Nothing much happens there, and only a handful of bored garrison troops remain. The island serves largely as a weather station.

26 Day Campaign

When the Marines first hit the beaches, shortly after nine o'clock D-Day morning, they expected to take the porkchop-shaped island in about 72 hours of hard fighting. The campaign raged for 26 days and claimed 19,938 American casualties — killed, wounded and missing. Upwards of 23,000 Japanese were slain.

Men of the Fourth and Fifth Marine Divisions made the initial assault landings. They carved out a precarious beachhead on the eastern shore of the island. Navy and air force bombardments had pummeled Iwo's defenses for 62 consecutive days.

Before noon the Marines had smashed through heavy defenses to move inland about 500 yards. The beachhead extended some 4,-500 yards northward from the base of Mt. Suribachi. Some 7,000 Americans were ashore.

More Severe Fighting

Resistance was light the first morning contrasted to the savage fighting yet to come. Japanese Lieut. Gen. Tadamichi Guribayshi had expected the main assault to fall on the west beaches. By noon, however, he realived his mstake, the defense tightned to set the stage for what became perhaps the fiercest combat in World War II.

A hail of mortar shells fell from Mt. Suribachi. Unceasing small arms fire barked from a network of pillboxes and trenches at the base of the volcano. Artillery shells constantly dropped from positions on the high ground to the north.

For the first time, the Marines knew how tough Iwo really was going to be.

By nightfall of D-Day elements of the Fifth Division had punched across the island at its narrowest point. Units of the Fourth had pushed up the steep slope from the beaches and had taken the fringe of the first of three airstrips—the prime objective of the entire operation.

Long Line of Marines

Down of D-plus-one found the Marine lines stretching from the hills at the north of the beachhead, southwtrd to Suribachi and acrdoss the island. Three days later the situation was almost the same—except Suribachi had been taken and the stars and stripes snapped in the early spring winds. the ground, however, was measured by feet.

Thousands more Marines came ashore. The Third Division had been called into action by Lieut. Gen. H. M. (Howlin' Mad) Smith.

An unending stream of supplies piled up on the beaches. The skies were almost black at times with airpower. The big guns of the Nacy ponnded the dug-in Japs on a non-stop schedule. Progress on the ground, however, was measured in feet.

Three days after the landing the big push began.

For more than half a century the Japanese had fortified Iwo for just such an event as this. It seemed that no matter haw hard you fought, how much steel you threw at him, the enemy was always shooting back from concrete dugouts and gun emplacements.

On Into Weeks

Now, in writing about Iwo five years later, you find hours blend into days and days into weeks. You merely remember what happened—not when it hapened. Or how. You must look at official battle reports for dates and figures.

You do remember, however, why Iwo Jima was important.

It is the key island of three in the so-called volcano group, halfway between Guam and Tokyo. When the decision was made to take Iwo, American B-29s were striking the Japanese homeland from bases on Guam Saipan and Tinian.

Iwo Jima—with its three airfields—straddled their route to Japan. Jananese interceptors from Iwo plagued the B-29s' return flights, and Iwo's radar and radios flashed advance warnings to the target areas.

Used As Protection

Iwo Jima was needed, too, as a haven for shot-up homeward-bound bombers. In our hands, the island also would protect the flank of soon-to-come landings at Okinawa and the planned assault on the Japanese homeland itself.

If you were writing of Iwo today you'd probably recall the end of the campaign as vividly as the beginning.

Skies were overcast the day the Marines started leaving Iwo. You crossed the island for the last time and saw why it had been so tough. You walked down the steep slopes and the black volcano sand filled your shoes. You walked past the cemeteries where some 4,000 Marines were buried.

Perhaps you remembered some remarks of Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine when he dedicated the cemetery of his third Marine division:

Victory Never In Doubt

"Victory was never in doubt," the general said. "Its cost was. And of the cost to us in quality! No one will ever understand that, who did not fight side by side with those who fell."

Then you boarded the ship.

You said to yourself: "I hope I never see that damned place again."

A formation of Mustang fighters, fresh back from a sweep over Tokyo, buzzed the airstrip and peeled off to land. The drome of northbound B-29s floated through the dark clouds. Suribachi was faintly visible through the haze, and yu could just make out the flag flying on its peak.

The Dynamic Little Pump

On just looking at the above picture, it might look like the hand pump did an awful lot of pumping—that's what the photographer said too. On checking up though, it was discovered that the Maumee river had flooded over a park in Grand Rapids, Ohio. (NEA Telephoto)

Mackenzie's Column

By Dewitt Mackenzie
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

That hardy perennial—the call for a meeting of Russia, Britain and America in the interests of peace—is again in bloom and is being viewed with mixed emotions.

None other than Britain's Winston Churchill raised this question during a speech in his general election campaign. He suggested a Big Three meeting on the "highest level" to try for agreement on atomic control and a truce in the East-West cold war.

Hard hitting British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin promptly dubbed Churchill's proposal a political "stunt", and said agreement should be pursued through the atomic committee of the United Nations. Apropos of Bevin's charge, observers noted that if Churchill's Conservative party should be returned to power he would in natural course be prime minister again. As head of government he would be in position to initiate such a parley, and this thought might attract votes now.

Others Advocate Action

However, others beside Churchill are advocating action. Newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic are editorializing vigorously pro and con.

President Truman at his news conference yesterday threw cold water on the idea of a Big Three meeting abroad. He reiterated that he doesn't intend to go outside the United States to meet with Stalin or any other chief of state.

Replying to a question whether he thought the time had come to see Stalin, the President said he did not.

However, the President said he would be glad to see anyone who wants to come to Washington to consult him. He declared the American door is always open to international negotiation for control of atomic weapons and he hinted that he still had in mind a possible special peace mission to Russia at some future time.

Russia Still Spreads Communism

Only last week Secretary of State Acheson, in a sensational pronouncement of foreign policy, rejected all suggestions for new American peace appeals to Russia. Instead he based U.S. anti-Communist strategy squarely on a policy of power.

Moscow has given no sign that it desires to call off its cold wat. On the contrary the evidence indicates that the Soviet Union is going all out in its drive to spread Communism. And what else can we expect, with Russia holding her gains in Eastern Europe and making sweeping advances in the Asiatic theatre?

Presumably Marshal Stalin would receive a peace mission courteously in Moscow and would enter discussions with it. But there is no reason to believe that such a conference would achieve peace.

On the contrary, many close observers believe that Russia would interpret such a move by the Western powers as an act of appeasement.

Any move which might be interpreted as appeasement at this juncture might easily be disastrous. However, this fact shouldn't prevent our taking advantage of every legitimate opening to achieve peace.

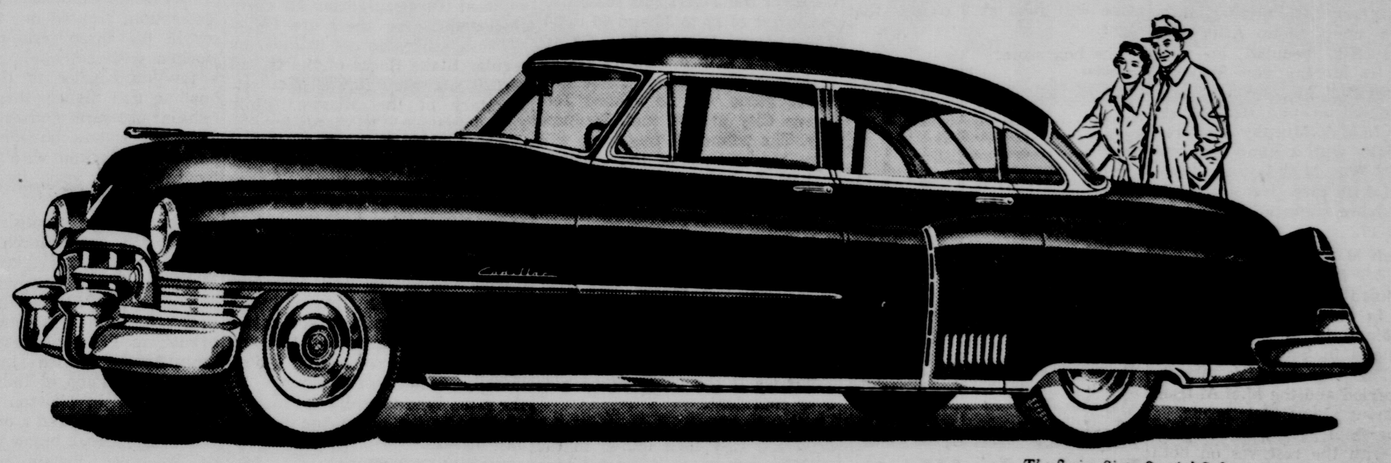
Cadillac presents
FOUR NEW SERIES OF CARS...



The Series Sixty Special Sedan

..All Dramatically Restyled...and Powered by Cadillac's Sensational New Engine!

TODAY, we are presenting, for your consideration, the finest, most beautiful motor cars we have ever been privileged to announce.

They are the new Cadillacs for 1950—and we want you to come and see them.

We not only want you to see them—but we think you should see them. For to see and inspect these wonderful creations will make you a sharper judge of all cars—and increase your motor-car wisdom in every respect.

There are four entirely new series of cars—all with wholly new bodies, and all completely restyled. We think you'll agree that nothing so sleek and dynamic and beautiful has ever been seen on the world's streets and highways. They are arrestingly and breath-takingly gorgeous—and all are distinctively Cadillac.

And not only are they advanced in beauty—but their performance is finer in every way.

Cadillac's great new high-compression engine is even smoother; it is actually quicker in acceleration; and it runs so quietly that only the indicators reveal when it is in action. It is simply wonderful to drive.

And—difficult as this will be for owners of 1949 Cadillacs to believe—the 1950 cars are even more economical to operate. Gasoline mileage really approaches that of the smaller, lowest-priced cars. It is no less than amazing that cars so big and luxurious should run so far on a gallon of gasoline.

Comfort and handling ease are also remarkably advanced. There is far finer road balance and over-all steadiness at all driving speeds. Steering is softer and more positive. Brakes are more efficient and longer-lived. The over-all satisfaction of driving—from every standpoint—is simply "out of this world."

Truly, here are cars so fine and beautiful that they deserve your personal consideration.

Make your plans now to come in and see them. You will be cordially welcome at any time.

S-C Tigers Beat M. M. A. Team 61-37

Local Cagers Have Record Of 20 Wins, 4 Defeats

The Smith-Cotton Tigers won their 20th basketball victory of the season by downing the M.M.A. team from Mexico 61 to 37 in a CEMO Conference game played on the Smith-Cotton high school court Friday night.

The victory gave the Tigers second place in the Conference with a record of 8 wins and two defeats. The victory also gave them a season record of 20 wins against four defeats.

Smith-Cotton will enter the regionals Tuesday at Boonville and have a good chance of winning the meet and going to the state tourney, if the Tigers can sharpen up some over Friday night's game. The Tigers were not up to par in the last encounter, and the Tiger reserves saw more action in that game than they have in any tilt all season.

High Pointers

Holst took high point honors again for the Tigers with a total of 17 points for the evening. He was followed by Ruffin with 15 points. Murphy, with five points led the Sedalia reserves. Doerr led the M.M.A. quintet with 17 points. Gerwe and Murray tied for second place with six points each.

Sedalia opened up in the first quarter with 18 points while limiting their opponents to two free throws. This was by far the best period for the Tigers, as they were sharp in offense and defense. Some reserves moved in before the quarter ended. Walker put the Tigers ahead at the start of the game, and the team was never topped by M.M.A. Walker and Brown hit for field goals and Holst made a charity toss before M.M.A. scored. The first Colonel score came on Doerr's free throw. This was followed by McCrary and Ruffin making two Tiger setups. Holst then made a free throw for the home team, followed by Ruffin hitting a set-up and a charity toss for Sedalia. Sterner closed the quarter for the visitors with a free throw. Lankenau completed the scoring when he made a long Sedalia set shot from the center.

Second Quarter

In the second quarter the entire Tiger first string was taken out at the beginning and stayed out until the half. Although the visitors outscored the reserves 15 to 7 to trail at the half by a 25 to 17 count, the "subs" gave a good account of themselves as they were playing against the first string M.M.A. team. Diesi opened the quarter for the visitors by making four points on a jump shot and two free throws. He was followed by his teammate, Sterner, making two jump shots. After this outburst S-C counted on free throws by Morgan and Shawver and a set shot by Murphy. Doerr then poured in two straight set ups for M.M.A. Murphy answered for Sedalia with a jump shot and a charity toss. M.M.A. then closed the half with three free throws to let the score stand at Sedalia 25, M.M.A. 17.

Colonels Make a Comeback

Sedalia's first string played the whole third quarter and only succeeded in out scoring M.M.A. by four points, 14 to 10 to let the score stand in Sedalia's favor 39 to 27. This was Sedalia's starters worst period and the M.M.A. team was playing above their heads.

In the final period, the starters mixed with the reserves on both squads and Sedalia succeeded in outscoring the visitors 22 to 12 in a wild finish to take the game 61 to 37.

After the game the biggest dance of the year took place at Convention Hall, it being the junior-senior prom.

Gremlins Win Consolation In PCAA Meet

Team Enters Sub-Regionals At Windsor

The Sacred Heart Gremlins basketball team won Consolation Honors in the P.C.A.A. tournament, Friday night at Green Ridge by defeating the Lincoln high school cagers by a score of 32 to 23.

The Gremlins and Lincoln quintet played a slow breaking game and Coach Palmer Nichols used all of his reserves in this tilt.

Tight Zone Defense

When the Gremlins went into a tight zone defense, the Lincoln team moved into the center of the court and one of the players tucked the ball under his arm and stood with it, while players on both sides visited.

It was sometime before the ball was moved, then a Lincoln player accidentally ran into Martin and was fouled. Martin then made good his free throw and play began.

At the end of the first quarter, the score stood 6 to 1 in favor of Sedalia. The Gremlins really began to move in the second quarter and at half time, held a 12 point advantage.

Reserves Move In

From then on, it was a question of what the score would be as reserves began to move in and out of both lineups. Jerry Labus was again high scorer for the Gremlins with 8 points and also played a "bang up" floor game. Goring and Christian were high scorers for the Lincoln team with 8 points each. So tight was the zone defense that the Sedalia team displayed, that the Lincoln team did not score a field goal during the first half and made only 7 during the entire game.

Gremlins To Sub-Regionals

It was the third victory in two days of play for the Sacred Heart team who will journey to Windsor Tuesday night for a game with the Knob Noster high school in the Sub-Regional Tournament. The game will start at 9 o'clock that night.

Smith-Cotton To Regionals Tuesday Night

Tigers' Foe Will Be The Fulton Cagers

The Smith-Cotton Tigers will enter the Boonville Regionals Tuesday night at 7:30 against the Fulton high school team. This is one of the sixteen regional tourneys being played in the state next week, the winners of which will go to the state tournament the following week. These regionals are for class A schools (250 students and over), only. The dividing of the schools has eliminated the necessity of the sub-regionals in class A. Sedalia won their sub-regional last year but lost out in the first round of the regional at Warrensburg to Marshall. The winner of the Boonville regional will play the winner of the Springfield regional in the first round of the state tourney.

Eight Teams in Regional

There will be eight teams in the Boonville regional. They are: Sedalia, seeded first; Boonville seeded second; Marshall seeded third, Columbia seeded fourth. The other four teams are: Saint Peters of Jefferson City; Jefferson City; Kemper, and Fulton. This is probably one of the weaker regionals in the state, and Sedalia stands a good chance to win if they hustle and play each game as they come.

Boonville is probably the only serious threat to the Tigers. They took second in the tough NEMO conference and have a good record of 19 wins and 4 losses. The number two seeded team is the only seeded squad that the Tigers have not defeated in previous games. The Boonville team will be playing on their home court and this will be a decided advantage to them. But they have the hard bracket to come through as they must play the number three seeded team before they can get to the finals. The teams are seeded on a won and lost record basis.

Team Statistics

Marshall: The Owls have had a pretty good season to date with 13-5 record. Sedalia has beaten the Owls in two previous engagements this year 43 to 20 and 53 to 39. In the second game, the Marshall five held the Tigers to a half time tie of 21 all, and could prove to be a championship threat if they get hot. Sedalia also has another score to settle with them as they beat them out in the regionals last year. Marshall will play their first round game against the Saint Peters team at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Columbia

Columbia: The fourth seeded team has a season's record of 11 wins and 8 losses. The Kewpies have suffered two defeats at the hands of the Tigers this season by the scores of 82 to 32 and 60 to 26. They placed third in the CEMO conference with a season's record in league play of 4-4. Their first round game will be against Jefferson City at 9:00 p.m. Wednesday. The winner of this game will play the winner of the Sedalia-Fulton clash at 7:30 Thursday night.

Fulton

Fulton is probably the weakest team in the tourney as they have won only two games this year while losing 16. They are the Tigers' first round opponents and could prove very dangerous as teams like that are bound to win sometime if the other squad gets over confident.

Jefferson City

Jefferson City took fourth in the CEMO conference with a 2-5 conference record. Sedalia has beaten them three times this year by scores of 40-23, 49-30, and 60-27. The Jays shouldn't prove very dangerous, but could cause trouble.

Saint Peters

Saint Peters is probably the strongest of he non-seeded teams in the tourney and should probably rate the title of darkhorse. They took third in the CEMO preseason tourney which is about the only comparison between them and Sedalia. If they get hot they can cause a lot of trouble.

Kemper

Kemper: The Yellowjackets have had a bad year and took last in the CEMO conference with a 1-9 conference record. Sedalia has beaten them twice 53 to 27 and 65 to 34, and they should prove little trouble.

The Tigers sport a 20-4 record for the season and second place in the CEMO conference with a 7-2 mark. They poured in 1,245 points in the regular season for an average of 51.9 points per game. While Sedalia was making their points they limited their opponents to 788 points and an average score per game against the Tigers of 32.8 points. If Sedalia wins the regional they will go to the state tourney for the first time in several years. The Tigers have a wonderful opportunity as they will play in the easier bracket and should be around 13 points better than any team in the regionals if they play the kind of ball they have in the past.

Schedule

The Tigers will play Fulton, Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock; Boonville vs. Kemper at 9:00 p.m.; Marshall vs. St. Peters at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday and Columbia plays Jefferson City at 9:00 p.m. Wednesday.

Be safe, be sure! Have chest X-ray Thurs., Fri., Sat., Court House, Sedalia. Adv.

Sport Scraps

(By P. Kelly Scruton)

THE dates for the Missouri State Fair are far away, but yet so close. Close enough that Roy S. Kemper, secretary, has started talking of what will be at the 1950 exposition and his tee off is Harness races. Secretary Kemper has a right to be elated over the racing program this year—his early closing dates on entries found 171 for the 1950 events compared with 141 for 1949.

Kemper also told me these entries do not include those of the Grand Circuit stake races which are the finest ever to be run on th Missouri mile. Running of the Grand Circuit in 1949, the first time for Missouri's track, saw records of every kind broken and some of the finest bred animals ever to trot or pace this track.

Even the thought of GRAND CIRCUIT seems to have something of an appeal to horse race followers, those who never before saw such a program and especially to those who follow the sport on the sport pages and in racing magazines.

If attendance this year hold up to that of the first season and the increase comes which is anticipated by those who know horse racing, then the large grandstand which looks big—will not be big enough. Missouri is taking its place in the track sport and certainly it will not be long before the State will be called upon to either enlarge or build a new grandstand or stadium.

The 1949 races proved so successful that already reservations of owners of big stables back east are making plans to attend the local program. L. A. Hawkins, Forstville, N. Y., who has entries in the various events has reserved two cabins at the Sedalia Motel, now under construction. Lawrence Shepherd of the Hanover Shoe Co., Hanover Farms, likewise has indicated by letter to Mr. Kemper he will be here with his string of horses.

IT'S almost that time again for Ma Leist, (Mrs. Henry Leist) formerly of Sedalia now of McAllen, Texas, and myself to pick our teams. Of course there is no doubt that Ma. will pick the St. Louis Cards and possibly the Chicago Cubs, and mine usually is the Cardinals.

Recently several Sedalians have had time to take a vacation trip, they all went to Texas and to McAllen and saw Ma Leist. Marion and Mrs. Hall was the first; Leroy "Dutch" Kirchhofer and Mrs. Kirchhofer were next; and then Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Keuper. They all tell me Ma sends her greetings back to her many Sedalia friends and is checking up on me as to who I'm picking.

Even if I thought some other team would win the National League pennant, I would have to go along with Ma.

Incidentally if anyone cares to drop her a card, her address is 2636 W. Beaumont Ave.

THE Regional tournament at Boonville, officials have the Smith Cotton Tigers picked as the favored team to win. All because they placed second in the CEMO Conferencein basketball. In fact a news release had the Sedalia boys all blown up as being a 15-point superiority BUT over-confidence can be an awful sharp pointed instrument to get them defeated.

I would suggest ta the boys before they take the news release too serious they sit down and do a little comparing. Smith-Cotton seasonal record is 20-4. Now take the Boonville high school cagers, they have a 19-4 record; then Marshall has 13-5; Hickman of Columbia with a 11-8.

Watch out boys who meet a stranger in Fulton in the first game, and even if you run up a big score do swell, take it in stride and win the tournament—who knows you might get another chance at Hannibal in the State tournament where it will really count again.

Grand Circuit Here Attracts Many Entries

Roy S. Kemper Has Bright Outlook For This Year's Races

The Grand Circuit racing program at the Missouri State Fair is attracting horses from the best harness racing stables in the country. To compare harness racing entries of previous seasons with those of 1950, one example is the fact there were 141 entries at the early closing entered for 1949 while at the closing time for early entries this year there are 171.

These entries do not include the regular Stake Races of the Grand Circuit program, Roy S. Kemper, secretary of the Missouri State Fair announced. In discussing the program, Mr. Kemper remarked the races this year should be better if not equal to those of 1949 at which time several track records fell by-the-boards and a world record was set.

In past years when the harness racing was not as well organized as it is under the Grand Circuit, early closing entries sometimes never reached more than 120, and those days were considered exceptionally good closing figures. At the same time they did not include as fine horses as of the present day listings.

Early Closing Events

Event No. 8. 17-Class Pace, (Robert Thornburg Trophy) $3,000.

Event No. 9. 26-Class Pace (Greater St. Louis Trophy) $2,000.

Event No. 13. Big 5-Pace, 14-Class (Governor Forrest Smith Trophy) $5,000.

Event No. 17. 22-Class Pace (Charles O. Botz Trophy) $2,500.

Event No. 19. 17-Class Trot (Jefferson City C. of C. Trophy) $3,000.

Event No. 20. 26-Class Trot, $2,000.

Among the early closing are two Missouri owned horses, U.N.O Bg by Palmer Cold Cash-Lou Cumman-Cumban, owned and entered by N. B. Ewing of Rutledge, Mo., and Kahoka Girl Bm by Palmer Cold Cash-Rose Cumban-Cumban, owned and entered by Ambrose Johnson, Kahoka, Mo.

Trout Season Opens March 1

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 18 —(Special)— Indications are that large numbers of fishermen will turn out for the Missouri trout season which opens at sunrise March 1 in state parks and managed waters.

According to Abner Gwinn, Missouri's chief of parks, reservations for opening day accommodations have long been taken at the three parks: Bennett Springs, Montauk and Roaring River. He emphasized however, that this is no indication as to the number of fishermen that will be present since usually many others come prepared to camp.

Dr. G. B. Herndon, chief of the Conservation Commission's fisheries section, pointed out that waters in the three state parks are stocked with catchable size trout a few days prior to the season opening and nightly thereafter as fishing pressure demands. Other managed waters outside of state parks are stocked with catchable trout twice a year, in February and in July.

The managed waters outside state parks open March 1 are: a part of Current river below Montauk; Greer Springs branch and a part of Eleven Point river in Oregon county; Meramec Spring branch in Phelps county; Roubidoux Spring branch in Pulaski county; a portion of Indian Creek near Stella in Newton and McDonald counties; and a posted portion of Dry Creek below the mouth of Westover Spring branch in Crawford county.

In state park waters, a daily fee of fifty cents for a "trout tag" is required of each angler, in addition to the regular state fishing permit.

Trout fishing outside of state parks and managed waters does not open until May 30.

K. C. Mohawks Clash With Omaha Tonite

Omaha Holds No. 1 Spot In Hockey Standings

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 18—The Hatfield and McCoys of the United States Hockey league—Omaha and Kansas City—will renew their ice feud at 8:15 o'clock Sunday night in the Pla-Mor arena. It will be the next to the last game with the Knights. They clash again on Wednesday night, March 15. Omaha is the team which went from fifth place in the standing within a month and streaked to a long winning streak for the top spot which they still hold. The Knights probably will win the pennant now, but Kansas City is very much in the running for a play-off berth. Omaha finally was stopped by the Mohawks, 6 to 3, the last time they played here. It was the first loss during the month of January and the first in 1950 for the Knights. Omaha is still winning handily over opponents but when the Knights and Mohawks clash there are a lot of thrills for the followers of the ice sport. Omaha has a lot of rookies and three brother combinations on the roster

Brother Combination

The Wilsons, Giesebrechts and the Bruneteaus are the brother combinations on the squad. The Bruneteau's are of French extraction. Another Frenchman on the Omaha squad is Marcel Pronovost. When Pronovost joined the squad the first part of the season he was worried how he would get along because he knew no English. But as luck would have it, Mud and Eddie speak French and they have been a great help to the sensational rookie, who is playing great hockey for the Knights.

Another thing fans can look forward to is a real battle between two fine goalies—Irish Bill Brennan and the Knights Sugar Jim Henry of the Mohawks. Jim, incidentally hasn't missed a game this season and his nickname really should be "Durable Jim" instead of Sugar Jim. Brennan has one of the best goals—against average in the league and the first time the youngster gained a shutout he went to the dressing room and thanked each Omaha player individually. What a great gesture for a rookie netminder.

It all points to a thrilling sixty minutes of action.

Otterville Cagers Won Cooper County Tourney

The Otterville high school boys basketball team defeated the Pilot Grove team by a score of 42 to 44, to win the annual Cooper County Basketball tournament held at Bunceton, February 7-10.

Before playing the final game of the tournament against Pilot Grove, the Otterville boys defeated Prairie Home 63-57 and Booneville Catholic high school 54-37.

Auspicies: Pettis County Post 16 American Legion.

Wednesday night Pettis County Post 16, American Legion resumes their weekly wrestling matches, in accordance with an announcement by Promoter Pearl Christy. The schedule calls for three events, any one of which could be classified as a main event as to the talent signed in each affair. The special or opening event of the card begins at 8:30 o'clock, Wednesday night in the National Guard Armory, Ninth street and Ohio avenue.

Incidentally, all of the six wrestlers stand six feet or more and weigh from 228 to 252 pounds. Each and every man is considered among the top talent of the country and has headlined many wrestling shows in various sections of the country in recent months.

Topping the list is the main event which brings together "Wild Bill" Longson, Salt Lake City, U., and Mike Sharp, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada. Longson tips the scale hand at 240 while his opponent sends it circling to 252 pounds. Big Mike, a seasoned wrestler squares off against one of the roughest of the ring in Longson, who has been featured many times in the St. Louis rings. The Canadian has a record string of victories of fourteen and one draw and Longson expects to break his luck.

Favorite Grappler Returns

Sedalia fans will be glad to hear Vic Holbrook, well known to the ringsiders of the local sport, is returning to this area and meets Lee Henning of Buffalo. Holbrook still lists his home as Hollywood or Van Nuys, Calif. Little need to be said about Holbrook and his type of wrestling. Hennings compares with Bob Wagner, who has appeared here and is known as one of the most vicious wrestlers of the square circle, and specializes in the knee drop and bruising headlocks.

The flying scissors expert Vic Christy who has been before local fans many times in recent years will clash with Tommy O'Toole, the fighting Irishman of Boston. Christy hails from Los Angeles. Neither boy will hold any advantage in the weight department and both are leading exponents in the execution of leg and body scissors grips.

Fans from Sedalia and surrounding area can expect a full measure of wrestling thrills in this evening of entertainment.

Oklahoma Defeats Kansas In Track

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 18—(AP)—Oklahoma overcame an 11-point deficit in the final two events to defeat Kansas, 52½ to 51½ in the opening Big Seven Conference indoor track meet here today.

Oklahoma's mile relay team came home first to pick up five points in the next to last event. Mervin McConnell and Dick Jones finished one-two in the broad jump to gain the needed points.

McConnell won the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet on his final attempt, for a new dual meet record. Two other records were broken and three others were established in events contested for the first time.

Jack Greenwood of Kansas was high scorer with nine points. He finished first in the low hurdles, second in the high hurdles and third in the 50-yard dash.

Indians Terrified Whites, But Seldom Took Scalps

(By the State Historical Society of Missouri at Columbia, Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary.)

The peaceful quiet of the pioneer French village of Ste. Genevieve was suddenly shattered by the shrill cry of an Indian horseback rider coming full gallop down the bank of Gabouri creek. The piercing yell had scarcely died away when other redskins took it up and a brawling, fowdy, drunken band of Indians swarmed through the village streets. At the first sign of the uproar, citizens of Ste. Genevieve gathered their families behind hastily locked doors and the heavy solid wooden shutters on the windows of their homes were drawn and bolted. Others took refuge in a log fort.

The insolence of the drunken Indians, the Peorias, Loups, Kickapoos, Chickasaws, annd Cherokees who ran shouting and screaming wildly through the town, is inconceivable. The Indians sometimes made themselves masters of the village and completely terrified the inhabitants. It can hardly be imagined now that such conduct would not lead to bloodshed. The boisterous redskins, however, seldom touched the whites and the well protected windows, the heavy doors and high picket fences around Ste. Genevieve homes generally provided a barrier against bloodshed.

Usually Peaceful

Between these hair-raising escapades, Ste. Genevieve enjoyed relative peace and quiet when the neighboring Indian tribes were content to remain sober and enjoy the trade and protection of the indulgent French who wanted only their peltry and fur. Often French and Indian children played together and the white lads learned shooting with bows and arrows and picked snatches of the Indian language.

A band of Peorias which lived near Ste. Genevieve in 1802 was described as a pack of "indolent drunkards and thieves" who would engage in hunting only to procure spirits. The rest of their time was spent eating, drinking, smoking and dancing. One French observor reported the Peorias seldom hunted for fear of clashes with other nearby Indian tribes.

Among the other tribes which periodically harassed Ste. Genevieve were the Osages, who generally refused liquor but were notorious horse thieves. Hunting and war constituted their only exercise and although they lived on the border of civilization, the Osages rejected civilized customs and dress. The Osages were terrors because of their predatory habits all over southern Missouri, but they rarely shot or killed whites.

The Most Peaceful

Most peaceful of all the Missouri Indian tribes were the Shawnees and the Delawares who were close friends of the French and seldom molested the Americans.

In spite of their predatory habits and their well recognized ability to terrify the whites, the Indians in southern Missouri remained subdued and did not provoke large Indian wars. The redskins were astonished at the white man's ability to raise large companies of mounted militia against them and confined their warlike activities to unorganized fighting in small bands designed to scare and overawe individual settlers and their families.

In addition to their horses, the Indians often stole white men's clothes which they favored over their own garments. In one case a band of Kickapoos overtook a wedding party enroute from Washington county to a Catholic priest in Ste. Genevieve. The caravan of a dozen men and women, including the prospective bride and groom, was stopped near Ste. Genevieve and robbed of all their provisions for a wedding feast and all of their clothes Left with only their horses, members of the party continued on to Ste. Genevieve where temporary garments were provided by local residents and the ceremony was performed according to schedule.

Safe Landing By Survivors Plane

FORT WORTH, Feb. 18—(AP)—The C-54 carrying survivors of the B-36 crash in British Columbia landed safely at Carswell Air Force base here at 10:33 p. m.

A crowd of wives, children and other relatives had been waiting at the field for over an hour for the arrival of the survivors.

The plane had radioed over Albuquerque, N. M., that one engine was cut off and one propeller feathered.

Heavy Damage In Fire On Farm

SPICKARD, Mo., Feb. 18—(AP)—Fire caused heavy damage early Friday at the farm of the late Arthur M. Hyde, former Missouri governor, six miles north of here.

A large building housing machinery and farrowing pens for sows burned, twenty sows and at least 23 pigs died in the blaze.

Machinery destroyed included a cornpicker, ensilage harvester, grain elevator, manure loader and a large stock of tools.

Two large silos, of tile construction, stood near the building, one was filled with ensilage, which caught fire and still was burning tonight.

Workmen knocked the empty silo down. Jim Kelly, farm manager, said the burning silo will be dynamited tomorrow so the smouldering fire can be extinguished in the ensilage.

Kelly said he could not give an estimate of the damage. He said the fire may have started in wiring for heat lamps installed to keep the sows warm.

How does his job look to you?

This is a central office repairman, one of the men who keeps the intricate equipment needed to give you good telephone service operating smoothly and efficiently.

A lot depends on him. He has to be a good man, skillful and well trained. He should be well paid—and he is—as are other telephone employees. (Their average earnings are shown at the right.)

But wages tell only part of the story. All telephone employees after 20 years' service can look forward to a pension at age 65 of at least $100 a month, including social security, and pensions to many will be higher.

In addition, he gets sickness benefits and death benefits up to a year's full pay, at no cost to him. He has seven holidays a year with pay and vacations with pay up to three weeks.

His job is generally pleasant, interesting, and important.

Chances to advance are excellent, because promotions are made from within the company.

Judged by any standards you may choose —wages, benefits, pensions, or working conditions—telephone jobs are good jobs. Yet union leaders are demanding a fourth-round of wage boosts.

Since telephone wages and working conditions are already among the best, these union demands are obviously unfair to telephone customers who must pay the bill.

AVERAGE EARNINGS OF TELEPHONE PEOPLE HERE

	A WEEK	A YEAR
Fully Experienced Central Office Repairmen	$78	$4,071
Plant craftsmen with five years' service: $64 a week, or $3,340 a year. One year's service: $43 a week, or $2,244 a year.
Fully Experienced Operators	$46	$2,401
Operators with five years' service: $44 a week, or $2,296 a year. One year's service: $39 a week, or $2,035 a year.
Fully Experienced Business Office Women (Service Representatives)	$49	$2,557
Business office women with five years' service: $45 a week, or $2,349 a year. One year's service: $38 a week, or $1,983 a year.

The above figures include basic wages for a 40-hour week plus overtime and extra pay for night, Sunday, and holiday work.

All telephone employees get regular scheduled pay increases from the time they start until they reach the top rate for their jobs. Under present contracts, which are still in effect, three-fourths of our people will get such increases during 1950.

Epworth Methodist Church Parsonage

The new parsonage of Epworth Methodist church Broadway and Engineer, which the people of that church have had built for their pastor, the Rev. Ralph Emerson Hurd, has been completed and open house will be held at 7:00 o'clock Tuesday night to which all friends of the church are invited.

All will first assemble at the church and will then go to the new home where a number of the church women will show them through. Others will preside over the guests books. After going through the home the guests may return to the church where young matrons of the congregation, in formals, will serve refreshments.

The new home which faces the north and is located just west of the church is the ranch house type built of red brick and landscaped with evergreens. A curving cement walk leads to the front door which is of light oak with three small panes, of glass.

Former Members Send Gifts

As the button is pushed to ring the bell chimes may be heard and these were a gift of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weber, who were members of the church until they moved to DeSoto, Mo., a few years ago. The gift was in memory of Mrs. Weber's mother, the late Mrs. Elizabeth Boyle, a faithful member of Epworth church.

The living room is long with two picture windows in front, one on each side of door. The windows are designed with three smaller panes on either side of the large panes. In the living room is a large fireplace in dark red tile with light oak mantel. The natural light oak woodwork is used throughout the home with doors of solid wood, all in one piece and brass knobs. The walls are a pastel green with darker green draperies.

Off the living room to the east is the sun room with draperies matching those in the living room.

Cosy Study

An archway leads to a small hall and at the back of the house is the pastor's study with walls of mulberry shade and windows on two sides. Here are built-in bookshelves and a large closet. The study is on the east and from it the hall leads to the guest room which is in wedgewood blue with two large windows. At the west side of the house, in the rear, is the pastor's bedroom which is in dubonnet and here also are two large windows. In both bedrooms are spacious closets, and between the bedrooms in the hallway is a large linen closet. At the extreme west end of the home is the bathroom, all in white. Floors over the entire house are hard wood.

Kitchen In Front

The kitchen is in the front of the house directly off the living room to the west. The window over the sink looks out onto Broadway and on either side of the window are built in cabinets and shelves. The drainboards are of white tile and are built up as high as the cabinets. There is no color, except one black tile on each side corresponding with the black and white squares of the linoleum. Below the sink are also built-in cabinets. Next to the kitchen is the utility room in which are the furnace and hot water heater. The room is white and has four doors, the one leading to the living room, one to the garage, and two outside doors one leading to the front yard and one to the back yard.

The lighting is complete with three way switches all over the house that the lights may be turned off and on from anywhere about the home. Too, there are electrical wall receptacles over the entire house, with a number of them in each room.

The house was built by the Dean Construction company.

Travelogue Is Given To Loan Association

E. C. Nelson Chief Speaker Before 125 At Dinner-Meeting

One-hundred and fifteen members and guests attended a dinner-meeting of the National Farm Loan Association, Saturday afternoon in the Ambassador Room of the Bothwel lhotel, with the president, D. L. Kauffman, in charge of the meeting.

Three board members were re-elected, H. L. Garnett of Lincoln, A. G. Lenz of Boonville and L. E. Durley of Hughesville.

Edgar C. Nelson of Boonville was the principal speaker. William A. Dickison, Association Service Division of Federal aLnd Bank gave a brief talk and reviewed the history of the Federal Land Bank.

Music was furnished by the Vaughan sisters, of Clarksburg accompanied by Mrs. Nellie Monegan at the piano.

Told of European Trip

An unusually interesting travellogue of his trip to Europe was given by Mr. Nelson in which he told of the two months spent in seven European countries and of his impressions of those countries and their people.

Seeing things as most Missourians would see them for the first time Mr. Nelson gave his impressions from the time he left New York on the SS Queen Mary for Southhampton, England, until he returned on the Queen Elizabeth from Cherbourg, France.

England he found to be a beautiful land, a fascinating hodgepodge of heaths and moors, hills and valleys, factories, grasslands and farms. There is history, antiquity, traditions, dignity wherever you go, he said, and the children are well behaved.

Has Dutch Cleanser Look

Holland, Mr. Nelson said, has the Dutch Cleanser look. The Dutch and the Swiss are the smartest people he visited in Europe. "About the only difference between them" a recent magazine writer declared, "Is that the Dutch can't yodel and the Swiss won't wear wooden shoes." Nearly one-half of Holland is below sea level, the speaker said, and water is an ever-present, ever-threatening problem. The Dutch have rendered it harmless by their fabulous chain of dikes and put it to work on their 5,000 miles of canals. When the Nazis blew up most of the dikes the Dutch rolled up their sleeves after liberation and started all over again. Everybody in Holland rides bicycles and they wind in and out between trucks and cars but nobody gets hurt, Mr. Nelson said, and there are flowers from early spring until late fall, something about the Dutch earth makes it burst with flowers.

Brussels Hub of Belgium

Belgium is a tiny land, the speaker said, of which Brussels is the hub of the wheel. It is full of factories and Belgium farmers rival Dutch and Danes in getting results from the soil, he said. Mr Nelson found the people of Belgium friendly, kindly and industrious. They love music, he said, and know how to have fun with little effort and cost.

Switzerland has about everything, Mr. Nelson said, mountains, lakes, forests, lovely little farms, electric trains, castles, chalets, old age pensions, a vast army of precision workers and a government that is run by the people at a cost that is not prohibitive. The tourist business is the fourth biggest business. All hotels cooperate to give the best service possible, and every citizen exerts himself to extend the utmost courtesy and helpfulness, he said.

Visiting Italy he was most impressed with Venice which he said could be pictured as a city half the size of Kansas City with all the streets and alleys full of water. The gondolas by the hundreds cast a spell of romance over all tourists.

The strangest city he visited Mr. Nelson said was Pompeii which was destroyed by Vesuvius when the fine what ash of the eruption consolidated with water and embalmed everything it covered but in 1594 the city was discovered by engineers.

France, Mr. Nelson said, is the largest country in Europe next to Soviet Russia. It is a land of small farmers. It has a flair for the artistic that finds its highest expression in Paris where there is art unsurpassed, charm and local color wherever you go, he said, and is the supreme court of high fashion.

Mr. Nelson concluded his talk by telling a little about some of the interesting people he met on the trip.

'Kiss And Kick' Battle High In Skies In Chartered Plane

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—A wild "kiss and kick" battle between a statuesque blonde and the co-pilot of a chartered New York-to-Florida plane flying at an altitude of 3,000 feet was reported to police here Friday.

Co-pilot T. C. Sallee, 32, who flew with the late Bill Odom on a round-the-world trip, said the struggle lasted 15 minutes and threatened to send the plane crashing out of control.

Finally, the pilot, K. H. Dubanowich, turned the plane back on its south-bound flight and made a shaky, unscheduled landing at Washington National Airport.

The blonde was identified by a driver's license as Miss Willie Jane Frost, 38, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Los Angeles. She was taken to a hospital in nearby Alexandria, Va.

Co-pilot Sallee said the woman chartered the plane in New York for a trip to Miami. She slept most of the time during the first part of the trip, but about 10 minutes south of Washington she woke up hysterical. Sallee said she began kicking the back of his seat facing the controls.

"She reached around my neck and pulled me back. Then she started kissing me," he said.

"I saw a chance to grab her hands when she started kicking at the windows, but I couldn't hold on. Finally I managed to get into the rear seat and hold her down but she kept kicking and struggling.

"She asked me if I loved her," Sallee said, "and hoping to quiet her, I would say, 'Madly . . .'

Fearful of Crash

"That seemed to quiet her for a while, but then she would start in again. She was throwing herself all over the plane, trying to open windows, trying to grab the wheel, trying to open the door."

Sallee said he feared her struggles and wild lunges in the little plane would throw it out of control as they came in for a landing.

"It was an anxious moment," he said.

The co-pilot said when it became apparent that the woman could not be subdued, Pilot Dubanowich signaled the Washington airport tower to have an ambulance waiting.

His message read:

"Have malfunctioning passenger aboard. Have police and ambulances standing by. Am going to land."

The single-engine plane landed at 4:55 a. m.

In Selma, Ala., Miss Frost's brother-in-law, who asked not to be identified, said her mother, Mrs. Norma Frost, left for Washington by Eastern Air Line plane early today.

He said Mr. Frost was "moderately wealthy" and that her daughter was an accomplished sculptress and horsewoman.

"It's luck," he observed, "that there was a co-pilot in that plane because she's a very strong young lady."

For the past 14 years, he continued, Miss Frost has made her home with her mother here and at Coral Gables, Fla., where they own a 20-acre horse ranch.

He said the blonde was graduated from the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts and from the University of Pennsylvania.

Co-pilot Sallee, who is employed by the Odom Aircraft Corp., at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., said he and the pilot were called to Laguardia Airport, New York, at 2 a. m. today for the charter flight.

He said the woman wanted to fly immediately to Palm Beach, Fla., explaining that it was urgent for her to get in touch with a man there who knew the whereabouts of a friend who was dying.

The airmen agreed to make the flight for $400. She paid $80 and said the rest would be paid when she saw her family in Florida, Sallee related.

Before the take-off from Laguardia, she displayed an Eastern Airlines ticket she had bought for a flight at 8 a. m. Friday, but said she could not wait that long.

Claims Killing As Accidental

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Feb. 18—(AP)—Illinois state polist said Friday that Harry Dennis, 34, of Yale, Okla., told them his younger brother accidentally shot and killed a fellow Oklahoman Wednesday on a hunting trip.

The brother is William Dennis, 22. The two are held in separate jails under murder charges, pending arrival of Oklahoma authorities. Both have waived extradition.

Victim of the slaying was Henry E. Sweeden, 57-year-old Pawnee county (Okla.) farmer.

The Dennis brothers were arrested last night by state policemen Frank Willmont and William Monken. They were at the home of William's mother-in-law, Mrs. Alvina Hendricks, who lives at nearby East St. Louis, Ill.

Willmont and Monken disclosed they have a double barrel .20 gauge Belgium-make shotgun which the elder Dennis said killed Sweeden. Harry Dennis is a veteran of World War II.

"There's nothing to it," the elder Dennis was quoted by the two patrolmen as saying. "The gun went off in Bill's (William) hands as they were getting into the car. There wasn't any argument."

The latter statement conflicted with the murder accounts from Oklahoma.

William Dennis has made no statement. He is held in Belleville, his brother at Collinsville, north of here.

Rescued Flyer Recovering

Staff Sgt. Vitale Trippodi, 23, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who hung in a tree after parachuting from a B-36 bomber on the west coast of Canada, showed effects of the ordeal as he lay in a hospital at McChord Air Base, Wash. Marks on his face and hands are medicine for the cuts. (AP WIREPHOTO)

Railroad Crossing Warning that Warns

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—(AP)—Ralph L. Holcombe of Culver City, Calif., proposes a railroad crossing warning that will figuratively rattle the teeth of autoists. He says that drivers sometimes fail to see warning signals that some mistake red for green.

But that no one is likely to miss a signal that suddenly jars him.

For this he has designed a series of bars, set in the pavement, flush and smooth when the dangerous crossing ahead is safe. When the warning signal goes on, the bars rise up a little—not enough to trip pedestrians. But to an auto they feel like riding over a washboard.

Steps For Hiring Of 'Rain Maker'

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—(AP)—Mayor William O'Dwyer announced Friday he had taken steps to hire a "rain maker" in a despr-at attempt to secure more than a billion gallons of water daily needed here before summer.

The mayor issued his statement after Albany's Mayor Erastus Corning had said he would oppose O'Dwyer's tinkering with the heavens.

Corning said he was going to learn if the state water power and control commission had the authority to regulate water production by artificial means and if it didn't he urged legislation giving it that power.

Yesterday's seventh dry Thursday, an attempt to build up reserves by getting citizens to conserve water, proved a bust.

It was "the worst day yet," according to Water Commissioner Stephen J. Carney.

"Commissioner Carney," the mayor said, "has requested permission to procure an outstanding meterologist to conduct a study of rainmaking. I have asked Commissioner Carney to proceed immediately with all necessary arrangements."

Red Cross Honors 159 Persons For 'Meritorious Acts' in 1949

By NEA Service

WASHINGTON — (NEA)—One day last summer, 12-year-old Gwen Anglesey,of Rigby, Ida., heard excited cries from the bank of a nearby canal. A neighbor's youngster, two-year-old Dickie Bryce, had fallen into the water was being carried downstream.

Gwen jumped into the canal, swam out to the boy and brought him to shore. Then, noting that he wasn't breathing, she applied artificial respiration and succeeded in reviving the child. She was credited with saving his life.

For her quick action and skillful use of swimming and first aid techniques, Gwen was one of 159 persons who received American Red cross certificates of merit in 1949. The award, limited to those who have successfully completed a Red Cross course in first aid, swimming or life saving, is given for performing a meritorius act in saving or attempting to save a life.

* * *

A few weeks later and a thousand miles away, Richard A. Sedin, a public utilities employe in St. Paul, Minn., arrived on the scene shortly after five men had been hit by an automobile while waiting to board a street car.

Sedin noticed that one victim was unconscious and bleeding profusely from a face cut. He applied pressure to stop the bleeding and maintained it until a police ambulance arrived. Doctors said his action saved the victim's life.

In Tuscaloosa, Ala., high school student Bobbie Jack Bradberry applied artificial respiration to an electrocuted baby for 30 minutes before the child began to breathe. The year-old youngster had touched a live wire and apparently was dead when Bobbie Jack began his first aid treatment. He and Sedin also received Red Cross awards.

Instituted in 1928, the awards are designed to recognize outstanding instances of prompt and skillful use of knowledge gained in Red Cross first aid or water safety courses. The life-saving act must be conclusively proved before the award is given.

* * *

Recognition has also been given for knowing what to do in an emergency.

In a freak accident near Pasco, Wash., an 11-year-old boy was impaled on the hood ornament of an automobile. Some eight inches of steel were buried deep in his abdomen. When Bruce Lee, an emergency ambulance attendant, arrived at the scene he noted that there was little bleeding and realized that serious injury might result if the youngster was moved.

For an hour and a half, while doctors were being located and brought to the scent, Lee resisted the pressure of an angry crowd of spectators demanding that he move the boy. When the doctors arrived, his judgment in not doing so was vindicated. The youngster and a portion of the car were taken to a hospital and the ornament removed by surgery. Lee was given full credit for minimizing the injury and possibly saving the boy's life.

* * *

The 1949 group was award winners is a good cross-section of America. Included are housewives, industrial workers, farmers, students, members of the armed forces and law enforcement officers. One certificate recipient is a brigadier-general; another, an Army corporal. A father was recognized for saving his son. A storekeeper saved a boy who was choking on a candy jaw-breaker.

And a national forest foreman received the award for saving his own life. His prompt application of pressure to a severed facial artery saved him from bleeding to death during a 45-minute trip to a doctor's office.

In all last year, 138 men or boys and 21 women or girls were honored by the Red Cross for their life-saving efforts. They came from 36 states, Hawaii and the District of Columbia.

GWEN AND DICKIE: At first, he wasn't breathing.

Six Men Have Joined the Army

Six men have joined military services this week through the local army recruiting station, according to Sgt. John Stacy, U. S. Army and Air Force recruiter.

Kenneth R. Weicken, Versailles, route 3; Jackie Dean Couts, 1009 East Thirteenth street, and Foster F. Reed, Jr., 1614 West Main street, enlisted into the Air Force and have been sent to Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonia, Tex.

Repented in Haste

LONDON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Mrs. Lilian O'Leary testified Friday her husband, Patrick, deserted her just 30 minutes after their marriage in October, 1946.

"How long were you engaged?" asked Judge Tudor Rees.

"Eight months," said Mrs. O'Leary.

Judge Reeves granted her a divorce with this comment:

FIDELITY— Two-year-old Johnny Frucht, of Pittsburgh, Pa., utilizes a hole in the floor to view his pet dog, Terry, banished to the cellar for some infraction of household etiquette.

Nine out of ten American children have one or more decayed teeth by the time they reach the age of six years.

Their Faces Are Red

SABETHA, Kas., Feb. 18.—(AP)—The faces of Sabetha firemen are as red as the suspenders all firefighters are supposed to wear.

The new firetruck the department ordered is too wide to go through the fire station door. Until 14 inches can be taken off the entrance, it will be necessary to keep the new truck in a nearby garage.

The 17 bags, including a steamer trunk and a foot locker, fit neatly into the sedan's new-type giant luggage compartment, which is formed by folding down the rear seat. And there's room left over for three front seat passengers. With the rear seat upright, the car is a roomy five-passenger sedan. Truman Preaches "Excelent Sermon" to Methodist Ministers

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—You have to have a card-index system these days to keep up with the accusations of certain Congressmen regarding Communists in the federal government.

Unfortunately the average citizen doesn't have time to keep a card index, so gets confused over harum-scarum Senator Joe McCarthy's recent accusation that there were 57 card-carrying Communists in the State Department.

When the Senator from Wisconsin finally was pinned down, he could produce not 57, but only four names of State Department officials whom he claimed were Communists.

A careful scrutiny of these names is important. Of the four accused by McCarthy, one, Dr. Harlow Shapley, at no time worked for the State Department. Two, Gustavo Duran and Mrs. Mary Jane Keeney, resigned four years ago; the fourth, John Service, was reinstated after a prolonged and careful investigation and after virtual apologies to him for ever questioning his loyalty. He is now serving with the most anti-Russian of all American diplomats, Loy Henderson, U.S. ambassador to India.

But there is even more interesting background behind Senator McCarthy's charges. Somewhat the same charges were made three years ago by another Republican, this one Congressman Bartel Jonkman of Michigan, just across the lake from McCarthy in Wisconsin.

On Feb. 26, 1947, Jonkman named two of the same alleged State Department officials—Keeney and Duran—even though they were not then with the State Department. Jonkman also hurled some accusations at Joseph Panuch, then deputy assistant secretary of state. Actually Panuch was the man who eased out Keeney and Duran, but Jonkman attacked him anyway.

As a result, Panuch sued Congressman Jonkman and the publisher of the Washington Times-Herald for libel. The suit against the Times-Herald publisher had to be dropped because of her death, but the Congressman from Michigan compromised the suit with an official abject apology which stated: "It was not my intention to accuse you of lying or of any other improper conduct in connection with your duties as deputy assistant secretary of state during your tenure of office." The Congressman also paid Panuch's court costs and, incidentally, was defeated for re-election.

But now, after both the voters and Mr. Panuch took care of the Republican Congressman from Michigan, almost exactly the same charges are shouted by the Republican Senator from Wisconsin.

Truman Preaches

With Bible in hand, Baptist Harry Truman preached a sermon the other day to a dozen Methodist ministers. He started off by assuring: "Well, I am not going to preach a sermon."

Nevertheless he fingered through his Bible, read two chapters out of Isaiah, and upon this based his hope for the peace and happiness of the world.

"You said you didn't intend to preach a sermon, but you have actually preached an excellent sermon," responded Bishop J. Ralph Magee, head of the Methodist Church in Illinois, when the President had finished.

"I am sure that all the gentlemen present would be happy to have Harry Truman fill their pulpits any time he could find it possible," added Illinois' Sen. Scott Lucas, who had introduced the ministers at the White House.

This brought applause from the ministers.

Truman went on to congratulate them for coming to Washington to study their government, and suggested that more people should visit the capital to study what the President and Congress are up against.

"Mr. Lucas is carrying a very heavy load on the hill, and it would be difficult for me to reach my objectives without his assistance," Truman added.

As a parting shot, the President reminded the visiting ministers that his primary "theme in life is to bring peace to mankind."

Ingrid's Baby

On Capitol Hill, the big issues of the day are not always discussed on the floor of the Senate, but in the senators' private restaurant. There, senators are franker than when their words are recorded by a stenographer for posterity to read.

But in the Senate restaurant today, hottest topic is not Russia, nor China, nor surplus potatoes—but Ingrid Bergman's baby.

Virginia's Sen. Willis Robertson is firm in the view that society must frown on Ingrid's illicit romance with Director Roberto Rossellini and the majority agree. Privately, however, senators sympathize with Miss Bergman's right to live her own life.

"I guess they must have fallen crazy in love," mused Texas' elderly Sen. Tom Connally over his bean soup.

Mrs. Barkley Gavels

The most charming gavel-banger on Capitol Hill is now Mrs. Alben Barkley, or Madame Vice President.

While her husband presides over the Senate, she presides over the Senate ladies every Tuesday. They meet to roll bandages for the Red Cross, to plan an annual tea for the first lady, or just to gossip.

Mrs. Barkley didn't go out and compete for the job of presiding officer; she married it. In fact, the news of this new responsibility was broken rather coyly by none other than the Vice President.

"Do you know anything about parliamentary procedure?" asked Barkley with feigned innocence.

"Heavens, why?" was the suspicious reply.

"Well, you are going to have to preside over the Senate ladies," announced the Vice President.

Mrs. Barkley thought it over for a minute, then replied: "Well, I've been in Red Cross groups for 15 years. We never needed any parliamentary procedure."

But just to be on the safe side, the Vice President gave his wife a few easy lessons. Whether it was this or her own tact, the second lady has been a big hit as a presiding officer.

Lustron Fiasco Proves Again That Haste Makes Waste

By Bruce Biossat

The country's costliest experiment in mass-producing prefabricated homes apparently is doomed to failure. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has decided to start foreclosure proceedings against the Lustron Corporation, maker of all-steel dwellings.

The RFC has loaned the Columbus, O., firm $37,500,000 in an effort to get it well-launched on big-scale housing operations. Both the company and the agency figure foreclosure may cost the government $30,000,000 of that sum.

The Lustron case is a sad history of dreams never realized. It is made all the more dismal by the fact that the project seems to have had the blessing of high government officials, probably including President Truman, from the beginning.

Why were these men so interested in Lustron? From the days of Wilson Wyatt, former federal housing expediter, there's been a notion in Washington that a well-developed prefabricated housing industry would go far toward bringing the cost of a decent home down to the average man's level.

At the same time, it was felt this goal couldn't be achieved simply by waiting for the tiny prefabricated housing output of established companies to swell into the desired heavy production. Government interest centered on initiating a bold effort to telescope this growth process.

The way to do it, Wyatt and others decided, was to help ambitious firms get quickly into automotive-style mass production of houses. The Lustron Company turned out to be the prize guinea pig in this plan. It gained control of former aviation plant space in Columbus. The RFC lent it money for machinery and operating expenses. Big things were in the wind, and the promises were lavish.

But somehow the dream always remained just out of reach. Many problems arose. It was hard to find the necessary skilled labor force, to set up a sensible selling organization. Continued rising costs wrecked hopes of a really cheap sales price.

Several times Lustron came back for more money to keep going until it could "get over the hump." The story was always about the same: "Just let us have a few more millions and we'll really be rolling." So much government money had been put into the experiment it looked unwise to let Lustron sink while there was still any hope at all. But, inevitably, there had to be an end to doling out funds without results.

The government has decided that moment has arrived. This doesn't mean the prefabricated housing industry has failed. There are numerous small companies doing well in the field, with a few showing impressive growth. But the evident collapse of the government's bright dream does seem to mean there'll be no spectacular catapulting of the industry onto a level with the motor makers. Progress henceforth will likely be slower than hoped for—but surer.

What's Sauce for the Goose

The reporters who work in the press galleries at the U. S. Capitol are jealous of their independence, as well they might be. Their freedom is symbolized partly in a rule that bars anyone from the galleries who has ties with government.

But this rule is now having a curious effect. It is denying use of the galleries to reporters representing the U. S. government, but allowing full privileges to newsmen from Tass, the official Russian agency.

Tass won a libel suit in Britain on the ground it is an arm of the government and thus should have diplomatic immunity. So there can't be any argument on its official status.

Yet the Washington press corps accepts Tass as if it were independent. Meanwhile the capital newsmen are refusing to allow our own State Department to have reporters in the galleries to gather news for dispatch to foreign lands over the Voice of America programs.

The department says the regular capital reporters naturally stress news from the U. S. angle, and it wants material more useful for foreign distribution. The reasoning sounds pretty good. But if the press corps remains firm in refusal, the least it can do is to apply its rule with equal force against Russian government men.

• So They Say

Under Democratic leadership, your government intends to stimulate increasing returns of capital into new productive investment. It will curb monopoly and provide incentives to new and independent enterprise.
—Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman.

Doubt as to the ability of the Commodity Credit Corporation to carry out its obligations could cause chaotic conditions and possible collapse of the farm price structure.
—Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan.

—O—

When compared with what the men and women of many other countries in the world have today, each of us can well apply to himself the colloquial judgment, "We never had it so good."

John 12:5; Matt. 26:14—16, 23, 25; 27:3, 5

THE STEPS DOWN

The most penetrating story of the results of egocentricity is seen in Judas. Judas began high, a loyal disciple. But—

First: He thought one could give too much to Jesus. (John 12:5.) He objected to the woman's lavish gift. His objection was a sign of inward holding back. Second: "What will you give me" (Matthew 26:15, Moffatt.) Note, he was the center—"Give ME." That request was the first step down for the prodigal son: "Give me." When anyone begins to say, "Give me," he is on the way down. Third: "He sought opportunity to betray him." (Matthew 26:16.) He tried to arrange his world so that it would not fall to pieces. Fourth: But that world did fall to pieces. Said Jesus, "One who has dipped." (Matthew 26:23, Moffatt.) "Surely," said Judas, "it is not I?" And the answer came back, "Is it not?" (Matthew 26:25, Moffatt.) The heart of things began to be revealed—his world collapsed.

Fifth: "Then Judas . . . saw"—his world beginning to tumble to pieces. (Matthew 27.3.) (a) He "repented" (verse 3), but he repented in the wrong direction. He turned in useless regret to the high priest and elders—turned to them, instead of to Jesus. (b) "He brought back." (Verse 3.) He tried to steady his tottering world by a half-way restitution. He brought back the money, but retained himself. (c) "What does that matter to us?" (Verse 4.) He finds his world, built up so securely, not trustable. His companions let him down. Sin has no cohesion in it. Sin doesn't care. (d) "Flung down" (verse 5) the money, the thing that seemed to matter so much in the beginning. The precious thing turned to ashes (e) "Went off" (verse 5)—off from opportunity, from life, from Christ. Sin is centrifugal. (f) "Hanged himself" (verse 5)—the self that was so demanding and so central in the beginning, saying "Give me," became impossible to live with. So he hanged the self that started him down.

Complete collapse will be the end of an egocentric self.

My Father, I see that this imperious, demanding self, like the camel's nose inside the tent, will soon put me out of this earthly habitation. I shall soon be able to live with it—unless I give it back to Thee for cleansing, for adjustment, for a new basis of living. I do. Amen.

The Bible Story

JEREMIAH

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 21st of a series from the Old Testament. The text is condensed from selections by Houston Harte for the book, "In Our Image." Illustration by Guy Rowe also from the book.

Why is this people of Jerusalem slidden back by a perpetual backsliding? They hold fast deceit, they refuse to return. The wise men are ashamed: they have rejected the word of the Lord; and what wisdom is in them? For every one is given to covetousness, from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. For they have healed the hurt of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace. I will surely consume them, saith the Lord; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.

The Lord our God hath put us to silence, and given us the water of gall to drink, because we have sinned against the Lord, We looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble. For the hurt of my people I am hurt. Is there no balm in Gilead: is there no physician there? why then is not the health of my people recovered?

And Hananiah the prophet spake in the house of the Lord, in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts, I have broken the yolk from off Jerimiah's neck, and brake it. And Hananiah spake, saying, Thus saith the Lord; Even so will I break the yolk of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from the neck of all the nations within two years. Then said Jeremiah, Hear now, Hananiah; the Lord hath not sent thee, but thou makest this people to trust in a lie. Therefore, this year thou shalt die, because thou hast spoken rebellion against the Lord. So Hananiah died the same year in the seventh month.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with Israel. I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me. From the least of them unto the greatest of them saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and will remember their sin no more.

In that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, weeping: they shall seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the way to Zion, saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant. My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their resting place. All that found them have devoured them: and their adversaries said, We offend not, because they have sinned against the Lord, the habitation of justice, the hope of their fathers. And I will bring Isarel again to his habitation. In those days, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Isarel shall be sought for, and there shall none: for I will pardon them whom I reserve.

Lamentations

Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me. Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and there is none to comfort her. Behold, O Lord, and consider to whom thou hast done this. Shall the women eat their children? shall the pries' and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord? Thou hast removed my soul far off from peace.

It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. The Lord is my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him. The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. For the Lord will not cast off for ever: But though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitudes of his mercies. For he doth not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men.

Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord. Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.

I called upon thy name, O Lord, thou hast heard my voice; hide not thine ear at my breathing, at my cry. Thou drewest near in the day that I called upon thee: thou saidst, Fear not. O Lord, thou hast pleaded the causes of my soul; thou hast redeemed my life. O Lord, thou hast seen my wrong; judge thou my cause.....

Thou, O Lord, remainest for ever; thy throne from generation to generation.

Music Modes

SEDALIA Music lovers have fairly beaten a path to Kansas City the past week for the Oscar Levant concerts of Wednesday and Thursday nights and the big Valentine Heart benefit of Tuesday night with Jo Stafford and Paul Weston. Both of these programs were in the auditorium of the Music Hall.

Next week on Thursday night there will probably be another excited and eager, but small group of Sedalians that will journey to the city for the "1950 Innovations in Modern Music" of modernist Stan Kenton.

This concert is the only one scheduled in this area and the followers of the Kenton flare of jazz will turn out in droves. The forty-piece organization includes sixteen strings. The addition of strings to a Kenton unit is something entirely new and from all reports from the west coast the strings do much to add to Kenton's individuality of style.

The strings are balanced up with ten violins, three violas and three cellos. The rhythm will consist of drums, guitar, string bass, conga and bongo drums and of all things, tuba. Kenton will be on the piano when required. The brass will be held down with five trumpets, five trombones and two French horns. The over sized jazz band will have reeds totalin five; two alto, two tenors and a baritone. The reedmen will double on other reed instruments such as oboe, basson.

Ten Arrangers

Besides this tremendous collection of top jazz men in the country there are ten arrangers writing the book. These include Kenton, Pete Rugolo, who has worked with an orchestra behind vocalists, Mel Torme and June Christy the past year, Neal Hefti and Johnny Richards. These men of modern music are the country's most progressive arrangers and their efforts have been widely acclaimed as the orchestra works its way around on the Pacific coast. The orchestra opened its 1950 tour of the nation in Portland, Ore., February 10th.

Prior to the official opening concert, however, the aggregation moved into the Los Angeles Philharmonic auditorium and presented an informal workshop preview for the disc jockeys, music students and fans in the L. A. area. The audience of this workshop preview voted for their eight favorite compositions and these works were waxed into an album by Capitol. The sides are due to be released soon.

Plans To Make Picture

The people who will jam the Music Hall Thursday night will be ahead of the jazz lovers in the east. After Kenton and his gang return home from their three months on the road and over seventy concert dates Stan will retire to his home in California and make plans for the 1951 vintage of "Innovations in Modern Music." Aside from that schedule Kenton plans to make a picture. This he will return to produce himself. There are also plans for a music school where he and his associates can foster young musicians who are eager to learn the facts of modern music and its various forms of jazz.

June Christy, the Kenton mainstay for the majority of his units, is back chirping for a cool one thousand dollars per week. This probably doen't make Bob Cooper, Kenton tenor man unhappy; he is her husband.

Features Many Old Sidemen

The unit features many of the old sidemen such as Shelly Manne, drum, Laurindo Almeida, guitar, Buddy Childers, Chico Alvarez, trumpets, Milt Bernhart, Bart Varsalona, trombones, Art Pepper, Bob Cooper and Bob Gioga, saxes. Other members of the various sections are certainly not unknown, for most of them have been in the country's top units for many years.

The Kenton concert in Kansas City will certainly be something to see and hear.

In the March edition of R. C. A., Victor's Picture Record Review, page five, there is a full page story on the Freddy Martin band as they appeared in the Shamrock Hotel in Houston, Tex. In one of the accompanying photographs sits Andy Kostelas, sax man, well known former Sedalia musician.

Andy has been with the Martin unit for several years now. His parents and the other members of his family are now living in Los Angeles, Calif. His father formerly owned and operated the Sedalia Hat shop located at 229 South Ohio avenue.

Porcupines are well supplied with quills at birth, but the stiff quality does not develop until shortly after.

F. T. Mulcahy awarded a contract to T. H. Johnson for the erection of two dwelling houses of seven rooms each on the east side of Moniteau avenue between Second and Third street.

E. J. Beyeler was engaged to appear as "Shylock" in the Shakespearean selection of "The Merchant of Venice" at the Maccabees entertainment to be given in the Royal Tribe of Joseph hall.

C. W. Daugherty, circuit clerk, received an expensive watch from a friend sent him from Berne, Switzerland. It is in a square shaped case and is very unique.

Prof. A. J. Smith, a former superintendent of Sedalia schools, now of Springfield, Ill., was the speaker at the assembly at the Sedalia High school.

Sixty couples attended last night a St. Valentine's masquerade ball given by the Cadonia club at the Sedalia hall.

The lowest reading of the temperature this morning as reported by the Economy Steam Heating company was three degrees above zero.

E. J. Adamson, manager of the Jesse French company's piano and music store, returned from a business trip to St. Louis.

M. C. Devine, foreman of the car shops of the M. K. & T. here, sold his suburban property south of Sedalia near Twenty-third street, to George Larm, of Cooper county.

The Doctor Says—

Treatment of Broken Bones Requires Very Careful Work

BY EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

Slipping on icy sidewalks or streets is one of the many causes for broken bones. Now a fracture requires attention as soon as possible. A person with a broken bone should not move or be moved except with great care, as the fracture may be made worse by motion. Splinting with a board or some other rigid substance is advisable before moving.

If a person fractures the lower leg while wearing high boots, the boots should not be taken off until after reaching the hospital, as the boot itself serves as a sort of splint. The proper splinting and moving of a patient who has sustained a fracture may make a great deal of difference in the setting of the fracture and in the time which it takes to heal.

Once a person who has a fracture has been brought to the hospital, skilled care is important. X-ray films must be taken to show just where the fracture is and the position of the fargments. To do this, the X-ray films have to be "shot" from different angles.

If the two parts of bone can be brought together in good position then healing should take place easily, especially in younger people. When the fragments are brought in proper position, the parts must be kept from moving to give the bone a chance to grow together. This rest is generally accomplished by using a plaster-of-paris cast.

Sometimes it is difficult to put the fragments back where they will heal properly and in good position. It may be necessary to pull the pieces apart with weights until they can be slipped in place. Occasionally, it is necessary to do what is called an open operation and use a knife to enter the fragmented area, remove small pieces of bone and place the two ends of bone together, perhaps inserting pins or staples to hold them in place.

Healing Takes Time

It is no easy job to select the best treatment and to apply it properly. The healing, or knitting, of bone takes a long time and almost anyone who has sustained a fracture must make up his mind to a long period of disability.

A fracture can be anything from a slight crack in the bone to a severe break in which the bone is knocked into small bits or sticks out through the flesh. As a result there is a great deal of difference in what may need to be done in the way of treatment.

Dr. Jordan will answer questions from his readers in a special column once a week. Watch for it.

THE SITUATION IS WELL IN HAND!

In the glorious tradition of the United States Marines, "Sands of Iwo Jima," which opens today at the Fox Theatre portrays a glowing chapter in the history of the corps. John Wayne is starred, with John Agar, Forrest Tucker and Adele Mara featured in the thrilling story of the Pacific comeback.

Back at their old trade, Bud Abbott & Lou Costello are necktie "pitchmen" in their laugh-provoking "Buck Privates Come Home" which returns to the Liberty screen today. The co-feature is "Stallion Canyon," outdoor spectacle photographed in western color. Ken Curtis and Carolina Cotton are featured.

End of a Chapter

THE STORY: Alice Pine, secretary to Muriel Halleck, who writes popular stories under the name of "Jo Palgrave," has discovered that she is strangely attracted to Brent, Muriel's husband, in spite of Alice's suspicions that Brent cruelly whipped Rick, his four-year-old adopted son, and in spite of Alice's feeling of loyalty to Muriel. After Brent kisses her, she goes to the train to meet Muriel, who has been conferring with her literary agent in New York. Muriel has just revealed that she has had a conference with an executive of a Hollywood film company.

* * *

MURIEL HALLECK had stopped for breath. Alice now knew the reason for her excitement. If this man Alec Crowther had flown from Hollywood to see Muriel:

"You've got a Hollywood contract now and a fabulous salary?" Alice put her thoughts into a question.

"Right, my dear. And that's not all. Crowther's buying two serials of mine for filming. So—" Muriel's strange eyes sparkled "—California, here I come."

"But when?"

"Just as soon as I can close this place and—well, do something else that has to be done. But I want you to go out to Hollywood first. And find us some wonderful and wickedly-expensive place to live."

"But, Muriel," Alice's head spun. "you won't need a secretary if you're working in a studio."

"Oh, yes, I will. Look, dear, I wouldn't be setting foot in Hollywood if it weren't for my free-lance work. I won't drop that and I told Crowther so. The net of it is, I'm to have plenty of time for private writing. Especially to finish this novel."

"But—"

"Oh, my goodness!" Muriel exclaimed. "Here's a wonderful chance for both of us—I'll make it wonderful for you too. And all you can say is 'but.' What's the matter now?"

Alice hesistated. "I was just wondering—Oh, never mind it."

Muriel's eyes were suddenly shrewd. "About Brent, eh? And Rick?"

"Yes, I was," Alice admitted.

"Listen, darling!" Muriel sounded rather sharp. "Brent has his job. And much as I'd adore having Rick, it's impractical. Between the studio and my own stuff, I'll be bushed all the time. And I couldn't ask you to be a nursemaid."

"I wouldn't mind."

"No," said Muriel decisively, "you wouldn't. But I've made my plans. It's all settled. We've had everything out today. Brent's keeping his job in Providence. He's getting an apartment and a housekeeper who'll look after Rick. Everything's going to be just fine and dandy."

Alice said nothing. But she didn't like the thought of Rick, cooped up in a moderately large city after the space and freedom of Grosvenor Point. Why could not Brent have agreed to a transfer of the entire family? Had his job, in this short time, become so important and lucrative?

"Well," Muriel said impatiently, "California's pretty nice. Is it so terribly hard to make up your mind?"

Suddenly it wasn't. For Alice saw a means of escape from a delicate and dangerous situation. A chance to break cleanly before things went any further. To put a continent between herself and an enigma of a man with whom it was both folly and disloyalty to be falling in love.

"I think," she said slowly, "that I'd like to go, Muriel. If you're sure you want me?"

"Sure, she says!" Muriel gave a ringing laugh. "And me on my knees begging her. Oh, darling, I'm tickled silly!"

* * *

CHUCK WISNER studied the dregs of his third highball and said: "If I weren't a trifle tight today, Toots, I wouldn't have the nerve to tell you. But you're a darn fool."

Alice blinked her blue eyes. She had met Chuck by accident this afternoon and listened to his siren's song anent drinks at Tolliver Inn.

"That's pleasant," she said. "In just what way?"

"For going to California," Chuck told her.

"Well, now? That was decided Sunday. This is only Tuesday. How on earth did you know?"

He grinned. "Small town, big grapevine. But that's beside the point." His grin vanished. "You're needed here, my friend. Very badly."

She stared at him. She had never seen Chuck this serious before. "By whom, may I ask?"

"By," Chuck said, a little owlishly, "a very swell guy."

Alice laughed. "Are you kidding, Chuck? It's corny, but—this is so sudden."

"Look," Chuck said, "I'm kidding nobody. What I'm doing is a—a partial John Alden. And if Brent ever finds out, he'll raise holy Ned. But I don't give a hoot. Because I think you ought to know it, if you're so dumb that you don't already."

Alice heard her voice, rising slightly. "I haven't the faintest notion what you're talking about."

He sighed. "Okay. I'll make like even you can understand. Brent Halleck"—he drew a breath—"is absolutely and sincerely—and honestly—nuts about you."

* * *

ALICE tried to ignore a delicious little thrill. It was one thing to know it, privately, intuitively. But—coming from this strangely serious Chuck, Brent's best friend, it was even better.

"Y-you're crazy," she made herself say.

"Am I?" He fixed her with green pixie eyes. "I wish you could see your face. It's all lit up like a pin-ball machine."

"Oh, Chuck, don't be such a dope. But even if—if it were true, Brent has a perfectly sweet wife."

"Sweet wife? Oh, yeah. So I've heard. But, are you in love with Brent, Alice?"

McKENNEY Answers Your CANASTA Questions

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

Written for NEA Service

Today I'm leading off with two interesting questions readers have sent to me concerning the rules applying to the picking up of the discard pile:

Q—If there is only one card in the discard pile, may I take it and go out? I was told that there must be more than one card in the discard pile so long as you have 2 cards to match it in your hand, or a wild card and one matching card. You can go out, or make one or more melds. You also can take a one-card discard pile if you can play it on one of your completed canastas.

The person who told you that you could not take a one-card discard pile and go out may have confused this situation with the regulation regarding a player who holds only one card. If you have only one card in your hand, and there is only one card in the discard pile, you cannot take that card and go out as long as there are cards in the stock pile. However, if the stock pile is exhausted, you must take the one card in the discard pile, if it is a player on one of your melds, and go out. If you cannot use it, then the game is over.

Q—Our whole family enjoys Canasta, but everybody has read a different book on it. Dad came up with a new one last night. He says that when you make an initial meld using the top card of the discard pile, you can take only that one card; that the pack then becomes an unfrozen pack for your side, and at your next turn you or your partner may take the pack if you can legally do so. Is he right?

A—No. I am afraid Dad made up a house rule there. Any time you take the top card of the discard pile, you have to take the whole pile.

Q—I made an initial meld of 3 aces. A little later my opponents melded 3 aces. At first I claimed they could not do this, but then I could see that I was wrong, and I agreed that they should be able to meld their 3 aces. Later on I picked up the fourth ace. I did not have any black treys, and I wanted to keep my opponents from getting the pack, which was frozen. I decided to discard the fourth ace, feeling quite sure that it would be impossible for my opponent to take it and pick up the pack. However, my opponent claimed that I could not discard a card I could meld. I would like to have you clear us up on this whole question.

A—You were right, of course, in coming to the conclusion that your opponents could meld 3 aces, regardless of the fact that you already had melded 3 of them. I have seen cases where both sides completed a canasta of the same kind.

You certainly can discard a card that you could meld. Very often it may pay to discard not only one card of a meld you have down, but 2 or even 3 of them, in order to keep your opponents from getting the pack. This is especially true if you have a canasta and another possibility of one.

Discarding cards that you could meld makes it more difficult for the opponents to pick up the pack, and they may be forced to make an unsafe discard which will enable you or your partner to get the pack on the next round.

Network commentator Edward R. Murrow returns to London for his broadcasts this week. His program is heard at 6:45 p. m. Monday through Friday over KMBC, and his comments direct from London in connection with the British elections will be of unusual interest to everyone. You're invited to tune in on KMBC each evening this week for these special broadcasts.

KMBC songstress Sunny Daye, heard on Dinnerbell Roundup weekdays and on Brush Creek Follies each Saturday night at Memorial Hall, also has an entertaining program on KMBC at 3:15 weekday afternoons. Sunny, together with accompanist Harry Jenks, has worked out a very entertaining mid-afternoon songfest designed for pleasant listening. Hope you'll tune in, because we know you'll like the show.

Sunny Daye

We'd like to call your attention to the Friday night line-up of good radio listening on KMBC. At 7 p. m., Robert Q. Lewis stars in the program "The Show Goes On," with talent buyers auditioning new acts. At 7:30, Lucile Ball stars in that hilarious domestic comedy "My Favorite Husband." Joan Davis is heard at 8 o'clock on Friday nights, and you can be sure that she'll get herself embroiled in several unique situations during this comedy half-hour. "Broadway's My Beat" is the KMBC presentation at 8:30, and it's a fascinating mystry-drama involving detective Danny Clover. Eve Arden as "Our Miss Brooks," the romance-seeking high school English teacher, is heard at 9 p. m. Friday evenings on KMBC, and it's a program designed for the entertainment of the entire family. For good entertainment and top-flight comedy, it's KMBC on Friday night!

For an entertaining and informative 15 minutes on KMBC, we'd like to suggest your tuning in at 5:15 p. m. Monday through Friday. Tim West conducts the Big Brother Club at that time, and Tim's programs are always turning up something unusual and informative on a wide variety of subjects. Children and adults alike seem to enjoy Tim's program, so we would like to suggest that you join the ever-growing host of friends on the Big Brother Club. Jim Burke, with theatre and movie information, rounds out the quarter-hour program.

One of the newest KMBC programs is "Curt Massey Time," heard at 9:45 p. m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Martha Tilton joins Curt in the vocal department, and it's smooth listening with these two fine singers. Hope you'll tune in on this new program.

Says Marriage Ideals Spoil U. S. Women

GAINESVILLE, Fla., —(AP)— American women are spoiled, says Dr. Perihan Cambel, Turkish-born associate professor at the University of Florida. "In America," she says, "a woman thinks only of getting married. In Europe a woman thinks first of her career."

Here doing cancer research, Dr. Cambel says Turkish women who attend the Universities take military training in summer, learning marching, shooting, radar, nursing and food service, and many have entered aviation.

"But wrong ideas you have about Turkey do not compare with ideas we have about America. You have no conception of the warped picture of American life one gets from seeing only Hollywood movies. Everyone lives in skyscrapers, wears furs and there is gold in the streets."

Small Size Radio and Video Expected

NEW YORK—(AP)—Experts who delight in trying to look into the future say they forsee the day when radio sets will be small enough to be carried in the pocket like a fountain pen. Also, they say, it is possible television receivers might be developed to a point where they can be worn like a pair of overgrown eyeglasses.

Television Cameras Do Tricks

NEW YORK —(AP)— The television camera, heart of which is an electron tube, is beginning to develope tricks that outtrick the movie cameras.

For instance, it can take one-half an image while a companion camera supplies the other half, thus putting two images on the screen at the same time.

Also it can make it look like a person can walk through a solid wall, and accomplish numerous other seeming impossibilities.

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(AP)—Michigan State Basketball Coach Al Kercher and his assistant, Chet Aubuchon, are former Spartan cage stars. KKircher also won letters in football and baseball. Aubuchon won All-America honors in the cage sport.

Syria Frets Over French Trade

DAMASCUS, Syria—(AP)—Syria and the Lebanon are worried about their growing unfavorable trade balance with France. They imported 9,460,000,000 French francs worth of goods from France in 1949, compared to 3,645,000,000 francs in value in 1949, compared to 631,000,000 in 1948.

Allotment Answer

DES MOINES — (AP) — Orval Dahms thinks he has the answer to the corn acreage allotment program—purebred cattle. On his farm of 320 acres Dahms raises only 35 to 40 acres of corn each year. All of the rest of his land is used for pasture and hay.

Dahm feeds all of the corn he raises. He never has participated in the government support price programs. He is not affected by the acreage reductions which corn farmers will have to make if they wish to participate in the support program.

Champion Muskrat Skinner Says He'll Not Trample Again

By Hal Boyle

CAMBRIDGE, Md., —(AP)—The world's Champion muskrat skinner says he's going to quit trampling the marshes.

"Man I've handled many a muskrat in my time, and I have less now than I did when I started out 40 years ago," said Curtis Insley.

Insley, a tall, powerful man of 53, is to the fine old American art of muskrat skinning what Joe DiMaggio is to baseball. At least Maryland's famed Eastern shore.

It came as no surprise to him last Saturday when he won the National Muskrat Skinning Contest at the Cambridge out door show against trappers from Maine to Louisiana.

"I really never have been beat fair," said Insley, "And that ain't bragging."

Skinned Five Muskrats

To win the $250 first prize Insley skinned five muskrats in one minute, 50.4 seconds. As usual one of his cheief rivals was George North, an older trapper.

To skin a muskrat you first go out in the marshes and catch one with a steel trap, and to an outsider this looks like the easiest part of the whole thing.

The skinning can be done in two ways. Insley is a lap skinner, who works seated with the muskrat between his knees. North is a foot skinner. He skins with one knee on the floor and one foot on the muskrat's tail.

In either case incisions are made at the base of the animal's tail. He is then shucked inside out and separated from his pelt by a series of rapid knife slices, any one of which could take off the trapper's finger. And the pelts must be recoved in marketable condition. They go into fur coats.

Likes To Skin 25 In Contest

Insley doesn't think five muskrats are enough to show what the contests can really do.

"I like to skin 25," he said. "That way you can get a hand in it.

"I can skin 1,000 in ten hours —and smoken a few cigarets doing it, too."

Insley has been going out to the marshes, the brackish wastelands that vegetarian muskrats love, since he was 13.

In a single 74-day season he once trapped 2,900 muskrats, or about 40 a day. He works on a share-alike basis with the owner of the marshland.

"I should have a piece of marsh myself," he said a little wistfully. He farms and does day labor out of trapping season.

In his lifetime he has seen the pelts sell from forty cents to $4.00 or more.

"I've made as much as $1,800 in a season," he said. "But I'll be lucky if I clear $50 this year."

Good pelts now fetch about $1.25. And the skinned muskrat carcass sells for 40 to 50 cents. They are listed on the menus hereabouts as "marsh rabbits."

'They're Good Eating'

"Man they're good eating," exclaimed Insley, "good as black duck. You can fry 'em or pot 'em—just like chicken."

Steady trapping and an increase of preying natural enemies—owls and raccoons—have cut down the muskrat population.

"So far I've only taken about 100," said Insley wryly. "I think I'll stop 'ratting after this year. Man, it is pretty hard to trample the marshes all day long."

His neighbors take this declaration with a grain of marsh salt. however. They feel sure Insley will be out there trampling as long as there is a muskrat still unskinned.

Chinese Fear Russian Bear

TAIPEI, Formosa, Feb. 18.—(AP)—The year of the ox ended Thurs. midnight and the year of the tiger began. But here on this Nationalist Chinese Island bastion there was fear of the Russian bear.

Nevertheless the new lunar year was celebrated throughout this island. Firecrackers were set off to frighten away evil spirits. Everybody wore their finest. All realized a fateful year lay ahead.

By ordinary logic, many think Chiang Kai-Shek and his diehard Nationalists should be crushed before the year of the Tiger ends. Somehow, though, the Nationalists think they will survive it.

They have convinced themselves that the Communists, although seemingly on the crest of victory, are already on the road to decline.

A year ago Friday North China belonged to the Reds. But the rich Yangtze valley, Nanking, Shanghai, Canton, Chungking, Chengtu and all of the southland was still Chiang's.

They expect the Chinese Reds to assail them this year, probably with the help of Russian planes and naval forces.

These sketches, taken from a government report, show what happens to a small house, a tree and a dog in the path of an atomic blast. The calm of the top sketch is broken by the presure phase of the blast, which whips the tree, tosses the dog and begins to shake the house apart. When the pressure is past there comes a lull, followed by the suction phase of the blast. Here the air rushes back to fill a partial vacuum. The tree is shredded, roof is ripped from house and dog is flung against the wall. Now the air is still again and nothing remains but ruins and a dead dog. Diagram at right shows time relation to blast, measurement of which is not disclosed, for security reasons.

Propose Cut In Liquor Tax

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—A one-third slash in the excise tax on liquor was proposed to congress Friday by the alcoholic beverages industry—meaning that drinkers would pay about $500,000,000 less in taxes a year.

The present federal tax is $9 per gallon for 100 proof liquor. The industry wants this cut to $6.

The present tax, the industry said, is shifting consumption "from tax-paid, legally-produced distilled spirits to moonshined tax-avoiding distilled spirits," with a loss of millions of dollars to the federal treasury.

A CIO union of distillery and brewery workers earlier in this week made a similar plea for a tax reduction.

Big Stick Over Coal Strike

Await Monday To See If Miners Have Back To Work Movement

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18 (AP)—The government held its big stick poised over the nationwide soft coal strike tonight, clinging to the uncertain hope of a general back-to-work movement on Monday.

The United Mine Workers' biggest local voted an almost-unanimous "no" to John L. Lewis' twice-issued orders to dig coal. Members of at least two other locals stalked out of meetings without even voting.

President Truman's coal advisers gave up hope of a week-end contract agreement. They recessed the talks in their fourth days, saying: "We are not making the progress we hoped for."

They told Mr. Truman so, in an oral but official report. They voiced relief, nevertheless, that "great many miners" will report for duty under the instructions wired by Lewis to all locals last night.

So the government stayed its hand for the present. It can seek contempt action against the 370,000 soft coal workers for striking last Monday in definance of a federal court's stop-strike order. This might end in another huge fine on the union's treasury.

Coal Gets Lower

Instead, the White House chose to see whether Monday will bring resumed production to build up the nation's fast-dwindling coal reserves, now down to critical ten-day average supply.

The National Coal Association said its telephones were buzzing with calls from mine operators reporting their employes won't be on the job Monday. The word has come from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Southern West Virginia, reported John D. Battle, NCA's executive director.

Cities and industries prepared for a longer siege. New York City prepared to dim a million bulbs on Broadway tomorrow night; under state rationing orders. As of Monday, all New Yorkers will meet a "certificate of necessity" to buy coal.

May Cut Production

The Ford Motor Company announced it probably will cut production unless the coal situation shows a major improvement this weekend. General Motors has cancelled all overtime schedules.

Federal officials privately agreed that drastic action could not be delayed many days longer. It is possible this may be sought on Monday, when Lewis and mine owners must appear for a hearing before Federal District Judge Richard B. Keech.

At that hearing Keech will decide whether to change his week-old temporary order into an 80-day "national emergency" injunction under the Taft-Hartley act.

Seizure Seems Remote

The White House ruled out one other possibility—a message to Congress asking authority to seize the coal mines. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman has no intention of asking seizure powers.

So the biggest news in Washington was the news from the coal fields. It was almost all bad, from the government's standpoint.

Eight hundred of the 1,500 members of the Robena local at Masontown, Pa., sat silently while an officer read Lewis' plea that they return to work "for the welfare of the union." Then the miners were told:

"The men that want to go back to work stand up."

Only two men rose to their feet.

Other locals were meeting and voting all over the country. The first two to assemble heard the Lewis telegram, then marched out without voting. These were at Colver and Johnstown, Pa., and have 1,300 members. Their action meant: No work for them Monday.

Some scattered districts, including the state of Washington and the Oklahoma-Arkansas area, thought it possible that digging will resume. There was even a chance that the movement might become general.

But the views of some local and district UMW officials ran like this:

"The men are fed up with orders to go back to work"—West Virginia.

"The miners are still madder than hell. They still want a contract." — Kentucky.

David L. Cole, chairman of Mr. Truman's board of inquiry, was more optimistic. He and the two other board members, along with Mediation Director Cyrus Ching and Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman, reported to Mr. Truman today.

Two Speakers For Teachers Association

Talks On Book Program And On M. S. T. A. Activities

About 75 teachers and guests attended the Pettis County Teachers Association meeting held in the assembly room of the court house, Saturday morning, at which time they gave various reports and announcements, and heard two interesting talks given by Miss Flavel Barnes of New York City, advisor of the UNESCO-CARE Book Program, and by Gordon R. Renfrow, Missouri State Teachers Association.

Miss Barnes, speaking on "UnESCO Book Program In War-Devastated Countries," said, "There are hungry minds, as well as hungry bodies, overseas. That was what she stressed to help rebuild war-wrecked libraries with gifts of new scientific and technical books. Miss Barnes was in this city to enlist public support for the plan, which the Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, in cooperation with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, added to its food and textile package service recently.

Help In Understanding

"By channelling food for the mind, as well as food for the body, to the people of Europe and Asia," Miss Barnes declared, "Americans can help nourish the understanding and recovery which is our best hope for world peace."

"Through books, we in America can feed hungry minds overseas. Money donated to the CARE-UNESCO Book Program will provide teachers and students with the books which are the basic tools of education. It will give farmers the know-how of new agricultural methods that can increase food supplies. It will give engineers the facts they need to rebuild devastated cities and factories. It will bring doctors up-to-date on new medical research that will help build sound bodies and minds. In all of this, we will be making a real contribution to the kind of reconstruction that helps people to help themselves.

Guilty Plea As Spy Made By Vogeler

"Mild Sentence" Is Asked By American At Budapest

By Endre Marton

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 18 (AP)—American businessman Robert A. Vogeler calmly told a people's court today he was a professional spy and asked for a "mild sentence."

Pleading guilty on all counts, the 38-year-old vice president of International Telephone and Telegraph Company testified he had been instructed to obtain special information about radar, rockets, uranium and oil deposits and to contact experts on atomic energy and help them escape from Hungary.

He said a Dr. Edsler, whom he identified as an Austrian atom expert, had been smuggled out of Austria, apparently with the help of the American office of director of intelligence (ODI) in Vienna.

"I used my business activities only as cover for my espionage work," he testified.

Three Others Guilty

These were the highlights of a court session at which three Hungarians, the last defendants in the trial, also pleaded guilty to sabotage and espionage. They were Edina Doery, a hotel barmaid and telephone operator listed as "baroness"; Klemen Demokos, chief accountant for the Standard Electric Company, Hungarian subsidiary of I. T. & T., and the Rev. Istvan Justh, a Roman Catholic priest.

Three other defendants pleaded guilty yesterday. They were Vogeler's British assistant, Edgar Sanders, and two Hungarians, Imre Geiger, director of the Hungarian company, and Zoltan Rado, a section chief of the Hungarian ministry of heavy trade.

(In Vienna, Vogeler's Belgian-born wife said: "It is obvious to anyone who knew Bob at all that he has been drugged or subjected to some kind of torture to make him say all these things. I don't know whether the torture was mental or physical—but they have certainly done something underhanded during the last three months."

(Similar expressions of disbelief in this confession came from U. S. state department officials and his business associates. Col. Sosthenes Behn, chairman of I. T. & T., in New York, said dates and alleged activities mentioned in the Vogeler confession were "at variance with the known facts.")

Self - possessed and speaking without a show of emotion or strain from his incommunicado imprisonment since Nov. 18, Vogeler answered with a simple "yes" this question: "Were you a trained specialist intelligence officer of the United States Army?"

Clinton Child Killed In Auto Accident

HARRISONVILLE, Mo., Feb. 18—(AP)—Ronald Owen, Jr., 6, of Clinton, Mo., was killed and his parents were injured severely in an automobile accident southeast of here on state highway No. 35 today.

The father, Ronald Owen, was taken to a hospital here. Attendants said he may have suffered a skull fracture. The mother, Mrs. Ruth Owen, was taken to a Kansas City hospital. She suffered arm and leg fractures and a fractured pelvis. Her condition was reported critical.

Jay Lee Bearly, 28, of Clinton, driver of another car involved in the accident, was not injured.

Seven Sedalias In Nation, How Three Got Their Names

As most people know in this community the name Sedalia came from a pet name that was given to George R. Smith's daughter Sed, (Sarah). It was first Sedville, then Sedalia. Now there are six other towns over the nation with the same name, Sedalia.

The others however are not as large as our city. The population of the other communities is as follows: Sedalia, Colo., 241; Sedalia, Ind., 424; Sedalia, Ky., 191; Sedalia, N. C., 25; Sedalia, Ohio, 317; Sedalia, S. C., 29. These figures are in part from the United States Official Postal Guide. The recent figures are probably increased considerably at the present time.

Sometime ago letters were sent from the Democrat-Capital with the intention of getting the original source of the seven Sedalia's names. The letters were addressed to the postmasters in the various towns. At the present time two letters have been received.

Charles P. Stewart, postmaster of Sedalia, Colo. sent the following:

"Dear Sir: In regard to the information you asked for as to how Sedalia, Colo., was named.

"The first name of the community was Round Corral. This was about 1855. The name then changed to Plum in 1865. Then about ten years later an early settler whose name was H. M. Clay, originally from Sedalia, Mo., laid out the town site as it is now. A name was voted on and Mr. Clay, selected the name of Sedalia."

Mr. Stewart says his community is located on highways 85 and 87 about 25 miles south of Denver. Cattle Ranching is the principal occupation.

Sedalia, Indiana

The second postmaster heard from was H. O. Duddleson of Sedalia, Ind. His story was not connected to Sedalia, Mo., in any way but was very interesting.

He said. "The local story as to the origin of the name Sedalia is as follows. When the railroad was built through here in 1870 or '71 this was a wood station. The first of each month was pay day for the wood workers and railroad men. The agent for the railroad was named Dailey. It bemame the custom for the people railroad was named Dailey. It month to get paid for their wood and cross ties. Thus "See Dailey" became Sedalia. It is located on the junction state road and the Penn lines from Chicago and Louisville. The original railroad was called the South Bend Logansport and Terre Haunte Railroad.

The four other Sedalias are yet to be heard form. When the information of their naming comes into this office it will be published.

Is On Hot Spot Due Surpluses

Farm Leaders Are Fearful Of Cut In Price Support

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—The government's multi-billion dollar farm price support program is being put on a hot spot by troublesome surpluses.

The Irish potato—which has cost Uncle Sam upward of $500,000,000 in five years of price supports—has done much to focus public attention on the vast program.

Farm leaders are fearful that the highly-publicized dumping of spuds and efforts to give away dried eggs and milk will result in consumer and taxpayer demands that the whole support program be trimmed sharply, if not abandoned.

These leaders say that without an adequate support program farmers would suffer a depression which would engulf the nation.

Nevertheless, farm spokesmen agree that the potato surplus spectacle is one the public will not long tolerate. Evidence of this is shown in current congressional efforts to tighten farm legislation so that new curbs on potato production may be invoked.

The potato issue hits the publick's pocketbook in two ways. It takes tax dollars to buy up and dump unneeded surpluses. In doing this, it holds consumer prices higher than their natural levels.

Possible Added Surplus

The big thing that worries farm leaders in and out of the government is the very strong possibility that there will be additional surplus developments that will stir up overwhelming public resentment against the farm program.

In the first place, it is possible that another surplus of potatoes may be grown this year. In fact, the government already is buying early-grown 1950 crop spuds to carry out price agreements. Even if congress passes rigid control legislation to cover this year's

Testified As To "Distrust Of The Mo. Navigator"

NORFOLK, Va, Feb. 18—(AP)—The skipper of the battleship Missouri said today he felt he was "utterly alone as far as assistance from my team of officers was concerned" the day the vessel ran aground.

Opening his defense before a naval court of inquiry investigating the grounding of the big Mo January 17 in Chesapeake Bay, Capt. William D. Brown also testified that:

1. He had developed a "distrust" of the navigator, Lt. Comdr. Frank G. Morris, because of Morris' performance on a trial run the ship made in December and because Morris made no previous recommendations before his "agitated" instructions the day the vessel grounded.

2. He "leaned heavily" on the recommendations of his operations officer, Comdr. John R. Millett, because of his "obviously more level head and greater experience."

3. He was piloting the ship toward two shallow water spar buoys in the mistaken belief they were part of the system marking a secret electronic range the ship was trying to run. The buoys, he learned later, were not those he had assumed them to be.

Before adjourning until Monday morning at the conclusion of the skipper's testimony under the direct examination of his own counsel, the court:

1. Withdrew and order "struck from the records" an expression of doubt put forth last week as to the competence of Ens. Elwin R. Harris, the big Mo's assistant navigator, as a witness and as an officer.

2. Advised Harris, who was plotting the Missouri's position the day she grounded, that his status as "an interested party" would be continued so he might remain in the courtroom during the proceedings.

Convinced It Take Time To Reach Accord

Not Anxious To Force Atom Issue With Russia Now

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson are reported convinced that the West may eventually arrive at a peaceful settlement with Russia—but only under conditions which may require years to establish.

Persons intimately familiar with the views of the two men said today the most important of these conditions are to show steel-nerve steadiness in dealing with the Kremlin, to tighten economic, military and political coperation of the Western powers, and to get a kind of total cold war policy for the United States—which Acheson believes this nation now lacks.

Acheson himself is considering making a major speech on foreign policy, and particularly Russian relations, within two or three weeks. It would expand his news conference statement of last week in which he outlined the policy of matching American power against Russian power where possible until world conditions are finally brought into balance.

Not Force Issue

One major consideration of the U. S. leaders is to avoid deliberately forcing the issue with Russia at this time on atomic energy or similar great questions. Their advisers feel that a western peace mission to Moscow, for example. would have a disastrous impact on an uneasy world if it failed, and they believe that at this time it would fail.

In general this adds up to following a narrow course between the dangers of a shooting war on one hand and appeasement on the other.

Acheson's projected speech may disclose officially what some of his most responsible aids now believe: That the cold war is going to continue for a long time and that no one now can prophesy accurately whether it will end in an atomic conflict or in restoration of tranquility around the world.

Administradon policy makers meanwhile have displayed no intention of acting on suggestions from Winston Churchill and various U. S. senators for some dramatic new attempt to make peace with the Russians.

Blame On Russia

LONDON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Prime Minister Clement Attlee tonight laid full blame on Russia for continuance of the cold war.

If Russia had accepted western proposals for the control of atomic energy, he said, "this cloud of fear would have been lifted from the peoples, but Russia would not accept."

The difficulty in effecting a settlement of international friction, the prime minister said in reply to Winston Churchill's plea for a new effort to bridge the East-West gulf, "does not lie in the method nor in the choice of persons to discuss these high matters. All that is required is the will."

Attlee delivered the Labor party's last radio broadcast before the general election Thursday.

He expressd the willingness of the western nations to discuss atomic and other "high matters" with the Russians.

Lord Beaverbrook asserted today Winston Churchill can end the atomic armaments race between the east and west because he enjoys the respect and regard of Joseph Stalin.

Committee Assails Auto Club Tactics

Roads Group In Denial Of Reports As To Gas Tax

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 18—(AP)—The Missouri Automobile Club was accused today of wanton and deliberate betrayal of its own members in its efforts to defeat Gov. Forrest Smith's gas tax increase law.

The charge came from the Better Roads Committee, the new organization that is leading the campaign for referendum approval of the tax hike. The law, to double Missouri's two cent gas tax, is scheduled for a special election test April 4.

The public statement charged that the automobile club management is "fronting for the oil companies and the bus and truck association of Missouri. These selfish interests are trying to block this state's highway development program and stall Missouri's progress and prosperity for their own private gain.

"The tactics being used by the Automobile Club of Missouri are despicable and contemptible," the statement said. It declared the members of the club weren't even polled as to their individual feelings about the proposed tax hike before the club came out with its policy against the hike.

"Haven't the members of the club any rights?" it asked.

"The members of the Automobile Club are entitled to know about the management's deceitful actions and its methods of disservice to them. The club management's propaganda trick—that of repeating falsehoods until the people believe them—is an old one. In Missouri such worn out tactics will not fool the people."

Complaints are Reported

The statement said members of the club have written or telephoned the Better Roads Committee to complain about practices being followed by the club's management.

The committee statement said:

1. The Club's claim that state highway funds will be turned over to political county courts is untrue. "The new law contains no such provision. The bipartisan (highway) commission will retain complete control and supervisory powers as now provided for in the state's constitution."

2. The cities will benefit along with rural areas if the tax increase is approved, despite the Automobile Club's alleged declaration to the contrary.

The committee' statement said the Automobile Club was just trying to separate "the existing friendships between the city folks and their rural neighbors."

"The proposed new law specially provides revenue which will insure a state - federal $37,500,000 road improvement program. This program will help the people in the mud-bound areas of the state and it will help the people in the metropolitan counties."

The committee said there was no truth in the club's assertion that St. Louis will lose its city gasoline tax if the new law is approved. St. Louis and Kansas City, the committee asserted, will get millions of dollars worth of urban highway improvements if the tax hike is passed.

Brings a Reply

In St. Louis, Gus Vahlkamp, secretary and general counsel of the Automobile Club, replied that the board of directors of the club "acts in the best interest of the state and the club's members and does not front for oil companies or anyone else."

Vahlkamp said: "Our members have indicated in letters to the club that they are overwhelmingly in favor of the auto club's stand (opposing the gas tax)."

Dead Due Collision Reach 29

Injured 105 On Long Island—One Motorman Is Under Arrest

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N Y., Feb. 18—(AP)—Federal, state and county authorities teamed today to investigate the collision of two Long Island commuter trains in which 29 persons died and 105 were injured.

Nassau County District Attorney Frank A. Gulotta summoned trustees of the bankrupt Long Island Railroad to an inquest into the accident which occurred when an east bound train roared through a red signal light into another passenger train.

Twelve trainmen and officials of the railroad were called to county police headquarters by Police inspector Stuyvesant Pinnel.

Public Service Commissioner George A. Arkwright said a formal hearing would be held Feb. 22 at the Jamaica station of the railroad. He and a representative of the Interstate Commerce Commission will preside.

Meanwhile, service was restored to normal almost 12 hours after the shash-up occurred at 10:36 p. m. Friday.

Three hospitals sent out calls for blood plasma as supplies ran low.

All but two of those who rode to death in the front cars of the two trains were men.

This was attributed to the fact that the cars were smokers.

(In another railroad accident near Gulfport, Miss., today, 17 persons were injured but there were no deaths. Twelve cars of the Louisville and Nashville railroad's Pan American left the tracks, apparently because of a broken rail.)

The Long Island collision occurred on a makeshift "gantlet" or "frog" siding, put down during temporary repair work on the main roadbed of the commuter railroad.

Jacob Kiefer, 55, of Baldwin, N. Y., motorman of the east bound train that went through the stop signal, was charged with second degree manslaughter. He suffered a possible brain concussion.

Nassau county district attorney Frank A. Gulotta said Kiefer would be arraigned Monday morning in first district court at Mineola, N. Y.

Gulotta said no criminal action was contemplated against the motorman of the other train, J. W. Markin who was sent home suffering from shock.

"Ran a Red Light"

Kiefer's 12-car train, carrying about 800 persons home from an evening in Manhattan, plowed into the westbound train at 10:36 p. m. (EST).

Both the railroad and police said Kiefer went through a red light.

Gulotta said tonight he had information that Kiefer took his train through two red signals before the crash.

The attorney said there was no defect in mechanical operation.

For hours, police and wrecking crews toiled frantically through the twisted, blood-drenched wreckage. Acetylene torches bit at the crumpled mass of steel from which came screams of the injured, trapped inside.

The dead, dying and injured were piled five deep in the two forward cars of the train. The cars were sheared in half by the terrific impact.

Operate Under Wreckage

Surgeons and internes wriggled beneath the tons of crumpled metal. They hacked and sawed off mangled legs and arms of some of the injured to free them.

Every available doctor and nurse from neighboring towns was called to the scene.

One eye-witness, 21-year-old college student, Paul Back, said, "There was a tremendous shock. My head hit the wall and the

Probe For Normal To Solve Adolescent Puzzle

By Alton L. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—(AP)—What is it like to be a bobby-soxer, a teenager, or 10-year-old boy?

A new adolescent clinic here is trying to find out. It is trying to learn what is normal or average in the physical and emotional growth, needs and problems of humans crossing the no-man's-land between being a child and being an adult.

The clinic has just started in a small way at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. A few adolescents come in on Friday afternoons for physical check-ups or treatments, and a talk with one of four doctors. Dr. Mary E. Mercer, assistant professor of pediatrics in psychiatry, is supervisor.

"We know something about the normal growth of infants and young children," she explained. "Now we believe that pediatricians and other doctors should know more about what is normal or average during adolescence."

Adolescence Age

Adolescence covers the ages usually between 10 and 11 on up to 15 or 16.

"It's a time of rapid physical and emotional growth and changes," Dr. Mercer said. "It is often a hard, upsetting and puzzling time for boys and girls, and also for parents.

"Children or their parents may worry whether they are growing all right, whether they're getting too tall or fat. Or the adolescent may have troublesome skin disorders or mild chronic diseases."

Adolescence often is marked by fast and wide emotional swings, attempts to set up mora or practical values, by concern with sex, by many emotional problems that the child is not yet able to solve or handle.

Need Reassurance

"They often need extra reassurance that their problems are normal, and that other adolescents share the same doubts and fears," Dr. Mercer said.

"It is at this age that the child begins to struggle against his parents. He wants to become independent, to be recognized as an individual person. He needs help not only to gain freedom but to assume responsibility for it. This is the beginning of emotional maturity."

The adolescent, she says, "needs help in becoming independent, and in understanding that independence can't come all at once. Sometimes the parents need help, too. In many families, the handling of the adolescent child is too much a 'do this or else' proposition. There isn't enough compromise."

Started Clinic

The hospital started an adolescent clinic to treat these youngsters a year ago but when word of it got around, social organizations began sending many badly adjusted adolescents to it, and the clinic was swamped by youngsters who should have been sent to a psychiatric clinic.

As reorganized now, the clinic, part of the Institute of Child Development, is intended mainly to teach pediatricians about "normal" adolescents. Its findings may later be made available to other doctors, parents, teachers, and groups dealing with adolescents.

Kaiser-Fraiser Reveals First Details of New Low-Priced Automobile

WILLOW RUN, Mich., Feb. 18—Kaiser-Frazer Corp., is announcing its low-priced car—a standard two-door sedan designed to introduce a new "low low-priced" market in the automobile industry.

First details of the new automobile, which will go into production at the K-F Willow Run plant on June 30, were made public today in an announcement which said the new car will deliver gasoline mileage upward from 30 to 35 miles per gallon.

Streamlined and attractively styled, the automobile will be shown publicly for the first time at the Chicago Auto Show, February 18 to 26.

With a low, sleek silhouette the new car has a big interior with full five-passenger seating room and a new-type luggage carrying arrangement which provides a cargo capacity more than double that of the largest conventional sedan trunks.

The two-door sedan will be offered in DeLuxe and Standard models with a customer's choice of two new Kaiser "Supersonic" engines, a four and a six, both engineered for high performance efficiency with economical operation and maintenance.

Henry J. Kaiser, chairman of the board, said that the new automobile was designed and engineered against a background of seven years of low-priced car study, and the construction of many experimental models.

"Our goal," he said, "has been to achieve the best combination of automobile performance, styling and economy of operation. This we feel we have accomplished with a price which will be within the budget of millions who have never been able to afford the purchase of a new automobile."

The new standard-tread car, he said, features "outstanding maneuverability in traffic and exceptional roadability on high-speed highways."

An outstanding safety factor is the large expanse of safety glass throughout, particularly in the windshield.

The need for stowing packages and luggage in a trunk which can be reached only from outside the car has been eliminated in the new automobile by a folding rear seat arrangement.

With the rear seat upright for passenger use, there is well over 20 cubic feet of space for luggage. With the seat folded down, the carga space increases to 55 cubic feet—double that of the largest sedan trunks.

Overall interior space provides plenty of leg room for six-footers.

The new car is yet un-named. A panel of judges is now going over more than 400,000 entries in the company's nationwide "Name-the-Car" contest which closed last month The panel's choice will be disclosed at a later date, together with additional detailed descriptions of the new car

Grant Rate Boost To 'Phone Company

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 18—(AP)—The Missouri Public Service Commission allowed a $9,500 a year rate increase for the Eldorado Springs telephone compan Friday.

The company sought a boost of $10,525 a year to help meet wage costs under the new federal 75 cent an hour minimum wage law. That would have produced a net return of 7.56 per cent on the company's investment.

But the PSC said that was too much. Instead it allowed rates estimated to produce 6.33 per cent a year.

Dr. Sander To Trial Monday

"Mercy" Death Case Has Aroused World Wide Interest

MANCHESTER, N.H., Feb. 18—(AP)—Did Dr. Hermann N. Sander commit murder by an "act of mercy"—hastening the death of a cancer-ridden patient?

The State of New Hampshire brings him to trial Monday on that charge and a jury of New Hampshire citizens must decide the answer—while a whole world waits.

That he wilfully injected 40 cubic centimeters of air into the veins of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, 59, "well knowing the said air injection to be sufficient to cause death."

County authorities have quoted the slender, mustached doctor as saying it was an act of mercy—that the woman's death was only a few hours away.

In his only public comment, Dr. Sander said: "I am not guilty of a legal or moral wrong. Ultimately my position will be vindicated."

The Uuthanasia Society of America is keenly interested in the trial. It believes "mercy killings" should be legalized. A society spokeman said: "This is absolutely the best case yet for our cause. It is good because of the doctor's integrity, and because he didn't hide what he did."

From far off Rome a different viewpoint. O'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, cited the fifth commandment, "Thou shalt not kill," in condemning a mercy slaying) changes his mission to an inhumane one of giving death."

There is the possibility, however, the euthanasia issue (mercy killing) might play al less prominent role if the physician does not take the stand.

Death Recorded by Cancer

The medical record of Mrs. Borroto's death last Dec. 4 contained the notation that air had been injected into her veins. But it gave the cause of death as cancer of the large bowel.

Mrs. Borroto, ill for some three months, had wasted from 140 to 80 pounds. She left her husband, Reginald F., a Manchester oil salesman, and a daughter, Elsie, 19.

The scene of the trial is the red brick, 45-year-old Hillsboro county courthouse just off Elm street—the main thoroughfare of New Hampshire's largest city.

Judge Harold E. Wescott will preside as selection of a jury gets underway Monday morning.

The regular list of 42 prospective jurors drawn for the present court term has been augmented by 120 more veniremen. There are several women in the group.

The state's prosecutor is William L. Phinney, a rugged former G-man who has known Dr. Sander many years.

The maximum The maximum

The maximum penalty for murder in New Hampshire is death by hanging. The jury can, however, recommend life imprisonment in returning a guilty verdict.

ginnings in the wartime losses: First, through the book-burnings and confiscations carried on by the Nazis, and later through the bombings that gutted schools and libraries.

Education institutions in France, for instance, she cited, lost a total of two and a half million volumes. The University of Vienna lost 150,000 books. At the British Museum Library, London, 250,000 books were lost. The library of the Institute of Agriculture and Forestry in Prague, Czechoslovakia, lost 18,000 of a prewar 20,000 books. In the Philippines, an estimated five million books were lost.

The book plan, as outlined by Miss Barnes, works this way:

CARE and UNESCO representatives abroad obtain lists of book needs, in specified categories, from libraries, universities, technical schools and research centers. With the funds donated by Americans, CARE then fills those needs as closely as possible by buying the latest and best books published in English.

Tells Of State Body

Mr. Rentrow began his talk with a brief history of the Missouri State Teachers Association, and said a group of forward-looking educators met in St. Louis in 1856, with Horace Mann, an early leader in the educational profession. They set up four major needs of Missouri teachers namely: inservice training for teachers, normal schools to educate for the teaching profession, a professional magazine for exchange of ideas, and a state professional association. These needs have largely been met, the speaker said.

Mr. Renfrow related that among the current activities of the M. S. T. A. are the publishing of professional bulletins and pamphlets, research work having as its object increased support of schools and the state educational program, and recruitment of new teachers. Mr. Renfrow stated that during the next sixteen years America would need one million new teachers, ten thousand new elementary principals, five thousand new high school principals, five thousand new town and city superintendents, two thousand new county superintendents and one thousand new college professors.

Talk Is Illustrated

Following his address, Mr. Renfrow showed colored slides which illustrated activities of the state teachers association in its building at Columbia, and also a series of slides showing buildings, sports, and scenic surroundings at Bunker Hill Ranch, the 2080 acre resort deeded to the teachers of Missouri by the late E. T. Behrens, a former Sedalian.

The meeting was called to order Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock by the president, Mrs. Imogene Peoples. C. F. Scotten, county superintendent, made some announcements.

Miss Marjorie Rector, secretary, gave a brief talk on the 1950-51 teachers requirements.

Reports of the study group activities were given by G. D. Corwine, Mrs. Evelyn Rabourn, Mrs. Charles Guier, Mrs. Vaughn White, Mrs. Donald Donath and Miss Dora E. Benz.

The second guest speaker, Mr. Renfrow was introduced by Mrs. Peoples. At 11:45 a. m., Mr. Scotten gave a summary of classification of schools.

Will Of G. N. Puntney Filed

The will of the late Grant N. Puntney, who died February 11, which was made June 1, 1949, was filed in the probate court of Judge A. M. Harlan. His niece, Mrs. Marie B. Wasson, rural route four, was named as executrix of the estate.

James Durley is attorney for the estate.

Woodland Hospital Notes

Dismissed: Mrs. Ernst Koeller, 2240 East Twelfth street.

Second, the government has accumulated more than $100,000,000 worth of surplus eggs and dried milk, which it is trying to give away for relief use; and about $50,000,000 worth of butter. Even larger purchases of dairy products may be necessary this year.

Third, there is the possibility that the government may have to buy large quantities of pork this year to support hog prices. This would be taking supplies of meat away from consumers—with their tax dollars—at a time when the government is saying the people need more meat.

In the fourth place, there is serious doubt that production controls on this year's crops of cotton, wheat, corn and peanuts will be effective in preventing accumulation of additional surpluses—which the government would be obliged under the law to buy and take off the market.

All in all, the government may have more than $6,000,000,000 tied up in surpluses a year from now. Its post-war losses on perishable products may total upwards of $1,000,000,000.

Aggravating future prospects for continued public support of farm programs are such developments as a rising public debt, government pleading for higher taxes, and heavy expenditures for national defense.

There is growing feeling among farm leaders that agricultural programs need to be overhauled. But they are miles apart on what should be done. An inability to get together on a program that would eliminate some of the unpopular features of the present setup could play into the hands of those demanding an end to price supports.

The Truman administration is leading the attack on present farm price support laws.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan says that "present support legislation is not doing the job of protecting farm income that needs to be done—if this nation is to maintain prosperity."

The administration wants to replace present laws with the controversial Brannan plan. This would, on the whole, support prices at higher levels than now. Also it would radically alter the method of supporting prices of perishables.

Aly Khan Is Injured Skiing

GSTAAD, Switzerland, Feb. 18—(AP)—Prince Aly Khan broke his right leg in three places today in a skiing accident that his trainer blamed on another skier.

The 38-year-old prince, husband of film actress Rita Hayworth, crossed his skis in a sharp left Christiania turn on the Wasserngrat run near Gstaad, turned two somersaults and fell hard. All the breaks were below the knee.

"It is one of the worst fractures I have ever seen in a skiing accident," said Dr. Fritz Hauffman, the attending physician. "He may not be able to walk for three months."

Rita rushed to Aly's bedside at a hospital in nearby Saanen. She had been visiting friends in Lausanne. Dr. Hauffman said the leg would have to remain in a pulley extension at least three weeks.

Aly's trainer, Maurice Moratti, said Aly attempted the turn to avoid a skiier crossing the track in front of him and was thrown by the ruts in the snow.

Dead Due Collision Reach 29

lights went out in all the cars.

"I got up and walked toward the exit door and heard screams for help. One man screaming 'Kill me, please kill me.' He thought his back was broken.

The splintering crash as the steel cars met was followed by screams of the injured from deep inside the twisted wreckage.

One woman, her left arm dangling by a tendon, shrieked: "My arm, my arm, I've lost my arm."

A man was trapped so hopelessly it was necessary that a surgeon amputate both legs. The man begged rescuers "to tell my wife I'm all right." He died on the way to a hospital.

Thousands of curious, as many as 30,000 at one time, ringed the scene. Some helped out the injured. Others only hampered rescue efforts.

At first the dead were placed on the lawn of a little Negro church nearby. As the toll mounted, the church was pressed into service as a morgue and the bodies moved inside.

Rockville Centre is 21 miles from New York City. The railroad, a major commuting link between Long Island and New York, is bankrupt and now is operated by court-appointed trustees.

It was the road's second fatal crash in less than two months. Two crewmen were killed and six injured when one train crashed into the rear of another in New York City Dec. 22. No passengers were aboard those trains.

The accident was the worst in the metropolitan New York area and the nation's worst since 45 persons died April 25, 1946 at Naperville, Ill.

Navy Veteran Victim

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—(AP)—John M. Weeks, a contributing editor of Time magazine, was one of the 29 persons killed in last night's crash of two Long Island Railroad trains.

Weeks, 30 years old, was a former newspaperman and a navy veteran of World War two.

Homeless In Floods 35,000

By The Associated Press

A cold wave and blizzards knifed across the north central part of the country Saturday, but clear skies cheered thousands of flood refugees in the south.

Another mass of cold air harassed the southeast, bringing freezing temperatures to parts of northern Florida.

As the cold wave whistled into Montana and the Dakotas, temperatures plummeted 20 to 35 degrees. Icy winds kicked up local blizzard conditions in the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Much colder weather was forecast for most of the midwest as the cold air spread south and eastward. Wisconsin and upper Michigan braced for an expected cold wave.

Suffering mounted in the south, despite clear skies. Increases of overloaded tributaries of the Mississippi contained to rise from earlier rains and backwaters flooded more farm land.

Hardest hit are Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas. Some 35,000 persons are homeless in these states and Missouri and Kentucky and the number is expected to grow.

In Louisiana and Mississippi, where 8,000 already are homeless, flood waters are expected to rise at least until March 1. There were few indications backwaters would recede until late March.

Immense Trading Barn Burns

ATLANTA, Feb. 18—(AP)—Fire destroyed one of the largest mule trading barns in the southeast early today, trapping and killing nearly 250 mules.

F. S. Hall, Sr., head of the National Stockyards Commission Company, estimated the loss at around $130,000.

Cause of the fire was not determined.

CHICAGO, Feb. 18—(AP)—Senator Lucas (D-Ill) said today Secretary of State Acheson's stand on Alger Hiss was a "great mistake."

"I told President Truman I would not defend Acheson if the matter comes up on the Senate floor," the senate majority leader said.

Lucas, in an interview, called Acheson's news conference remark, "I will not turn my back on Alger Hiss," a "great mistake."

"Acheson got emotional," Lucas said. "But I don't think it will become a campaign issue—not a big one anyway."

Boyle's Column

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—(AP)—Writing a column for the newspapers is getting to be downright perilous.

It used to be a columnist didn't know where his next chunk of caviar was coming from. Now he doesn't know whence the next brick is going to be flung at him. But he feels sure there won't be a hamburger tied to it.

Latest case in point is actress Joan Bennett's Valentine gift of a deodorized skunk to columnist Hedda Hopper, who heralds happenings in Hollywood. Taking this gesture as a criticism of her literary efforts, the lady columnist gave the woods pussy to a cat-fancier, murmuring on the "great affinity between cats and skunks."

A Place for It

Personally, if anyone shipped me a sanitary skunk I'd have kept him and put him to work. I'd tie him to my desk to scare away press agents. Often these disparaging presents sent to a columnist by his riled readers can be used to further his career.

Once a stranger sent me a reddish blue glass eye, and I have found it highly useful. When the receptionist phones in to say, "there's a man out here mad at something you wrote," I tell her, "show him in." Then I quickly tape the glass eye onto the middle of my forehead.

When I look up and say, "yes, what is it, fellows?" the man takes one gander, wipes his face with his handkerchief, and walks away. He feels, I hope, that anyone with three eyes can't be blamed too much for anything he does.

A Bad Precedent

What worries me about the Hollywood skunk Valentine episode is that it sets a bad precedent. What if I unknowingly wrote something that peeved John D. Rockefeller, Jr.? I might open my door some morning and find a whole herd of white elephants tied to it. This would be hard to explain to my apartment house-manager, as he doesn't even allow eagles or small dogs in the place.

From now on no columnist can feel safe from the "indignant subscriber." The world is full of animals from bettles to buffaloe, and the columnist who wittingly or unwittingly offends his readers may shortly find his home has become an annex to the zoo.

It is easy to say, "well, don't write things that annoy people." But just try writing a column yourself and see how many days you can go without making someone angry. Anything you write can stir up reader wrath, even if you just say, "etaoin shrdlu, etaoin shrdlu." They get the idea you don't like foreigners.

To Attack Sin

My own lifelong policy has been to attack nothing but poison snakes and sin. But when I did criticize poison snakes in a friendly way recently, a naturalist wrote back: "Who are you to pick on poison snakes? The average poison snake destroys more vermin than you do, apeface!"

There you are. I still intend to attack sin one of these days. But sure as sin itself somebody'll write back and demand, "what are you trying to do—ruin my business?"

NEW YORK—(AP)—Being grown up isn't half the fun you thought it would be when young.

Every child dreams of the time when he will be as tall as the adults who tower above him, and have as big a voice, and money of his own in his pocket.

To him all grownups, even the kindest and most understanding, are jailors. An he bears for them the profound distrust that a small dog does for a large one; the feeling of a midget, who knows his own weakness, toward a giant who doesn't seem to know his own strength.

The attitude of a child to a grownup is a mixture of envy, frustration and admiration. And the thing he resents most is the fact he is so dependent upon him.

The trouble is they live in two separate worlds, and the bridge that connects them is a one-way path that the child must move along more slowly than he wants to.

A Complex World

To him his world is a highly complex one, full of doubts, fears and forbidden ecstasies—a world in which there are only a few things he can do and many things he can't. Naturally, then, to his eyes the adult world is a simple and desirable world. What problems could adults have? They can stay up as late as they like, go to a movie whenever they want to, and buy all the candy their big fat stomachs will hold.

What makes grownups so often act cross and irritable then? Why, they must be crazy. And I think every child is secretly convinced that every grownup really is touched in the head.

I can remember one of my father's friends saying to me once: "You don't know how lucky you are, boy. I only wish I was ten years old again."

Had Another Idea

And I can recall clearly my own thought:

"I wish you were, too—I'd kick you."

It is in adolescence, however, when the two worlds of boyhood and manhood begin to merge that the adult loses most of his standing with the young. The wonder and admiration have worn off.

The eyes of adolescence have a terrible and ruthless honesty. They see the grownup as a pitiful and pretentious tyrant, leaning on his authority to hide his own weaknesses. The youth has a two-way view then, and often he wonders if it wouldn't be better to crawl back into childhood than to become an adult like those he sees around him.

But the path is still one way. He has to go on, reluctantly or not. And once he does become a grownup he finds himself a prisoner in a new and strange jail. Why it isn't a simplething at all!

Not So Much Fun

He is tall now—but so are those around him. Sure, he can run fact—but there isn't anything to run for, unless he is a politician. Sure, he can buy all the ice cream cones he wants, but he only wants one, if any. And there are so many hard-to-get-hold things he never had to worry about as a child—a job, a wife, and new toys like automobiles.

Being an adult, knowing their problems, for the first time in his life he begins to pity them and himself for the spot they're in. When he has children he realizes he is not the jailor—not from his standpoint. He is their loving prisoner, who sometimes must hurt them while trying to help them. He hates to say "Don't" to them, but feels he has to.

No, being grownup isn't the fun a child thinks it is. It is just the dreams of childhood encased in a shell of duty and responsibility.

School Nurse Makes Talk At Hubbard

Mrs. John Murrell, public school nurse, addressed the entire student body of Hubbard school, Friday, at the 11 o'clock assembly.

Some of the highlights of Mrs. Murrell's address were:

"Even though a person may have a brilliant mind and a healthy body—if he has an unpleasant personality he will be given a second place in life.

"The most important places for a child to learn to work is in the home and school. Be willing to do an assigned chore at home or school. This will help you when you enter your life's work as an adult.

"Students, lead a clean and healthy life. Avoid the pitfalls of adolescence. Choose your friends wisely. You are judged by the friends you keep. The friends you make during adolescence are the most important friends you will ever have. They will stay with you.

"Adolescens should not have too much freedom. It is during this time of life so many boys and girls make mistakes.

Be Proud of Your Race

"Students, do not feel or think that you are handicapped because of your race, creed, or color. Be proud of your race. Individuality is your birth-right. You have many outstanding people of your race to be proud of, namely: Lena Horn, Bill Robinson, Marion Anderson, Joe Louis, and many others. Time does not permit me to name them all.

"Above all, whatever job you have to do, do it better than anyone else. Be like Joe Louis—do your best—be your best. In his field, Joe Louis, is The Best, not because he was smart and did not listen to what his manager and trainer told him to do but because he wanted to do what was right and he wanted to do his job better than anyone else."

The entire student body was very attentive and were very much inspired by Mrs. Murrell's address.

Music for the program was furnished by the Hubbard school band, under the direction of Mr. Charles Moten.

J. B. Hylick, school principal, gave the closing remarks, thanking Mrs. Murrell for such a timely address. In his remarks he re-emphasized to the students the importance of making friends and keeping them—taking jobs and doing them beter than anybody else.

Mr. Hylick invited the public, through the students, to come down and observe, at any time, just how well the children are observing the Keep-Clean Campaign now in progress.

Staff Brutality Is Eliminated

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Feb. 18—(AP)—"Staff brutality and a vicious system of inmate leadership" have been eliminated at the state training school for boys at Boonville, Francis Smith of St. Joseph reported here Friday.

Smith, chairman of the state board of training schools, made his report at a meeting of the board, summing up its activities since it took control in March, 1948.

He said brutality by staff members at all three state training schools is cause for immediate dismissal and has been eliminated.

Also eradicated, Smith said, was a "vicious system at Boonville of leadership invested in a few inmates, fostering vice and sex perversion which gave the boys an education in crime."

The board has discarded the old military system at the boys' school which was only "sham and false display" without any advantages of a real military system, Smith said.

The board invited a number of circuit court judges who handle juvenile cases in northwest Missouri to a meeting at Boonville March 24 for an inspection of the school.

Style Guide for today's woman

By Frances Sagaloff at Sage's

New dresses are coming in daily and they're pretty. Lots and lots of navy with two or three color trim—some have white collars and they are adorable. Nothing is more feminine than navy with white trim.

Start the season off by shortening your old skirts. Thirteen inches from the floor is suggested and although everyone can't wear that exact length, find your proper hemline and wear it now.

This is a good time to discuss hose. The new spring shades are here. I have found there are always three important shades each season and a few lesser ones. FAUN—a neutral sand shade for pale shades and black. CAPRICE—a medium taupe to wear with beige to brown and navy. BLUSH—the natural shade to wear with pastels, white and black. Now is the time to finish up with your winter shades and buy your new hose in the spring shades to fit your wardrobe.

Oriental Art Curator To Be Sorosis Guest

Miss Jeanne Harris, assistant to Laurence Sickman, curator of Oriental art at the Nelson Art Gallery in Kansas City, will be the speaker at Sorosis Monday afternoon at the Heard Memorial club house.

Miss Harris makes frequent use of her ability to read and speak Chinese in the research of all Chinese paintings and art objects and she hopes to supplement her skeleton vocabulary someday with a visit to China which has been her ambition since her graduation several years ago from Sweet Briar college, Lynchburg, Va. with a bachelor of arts degree. She has, however, been unable to make the trip because of the war.

With such a trip in mind she began the study of Oriental art as well as museum procedure. While a member of the staff at the Newark Museum, Newark, N. J., she was schooled in the various museum departments and her experience there proved valuable later at the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art where she spent the next few years. While in New York she decided to take her master's degree and she applied for admission to the Columbia university under the Chinese Cultural Fellowship program. She studied in the department of Chinese and Japanese for a year and it was there that she acquired the knowledge of Chinese languages. The following year the program was discontinued but she completed her master's degree.

The various duties of Miss Harris are exhibitions, both in and out of the gallery, the taking care of the collections, which requires storage, cleaning, and preservation, research work to place objects in their proper historical periods and checking their authenticity with reference to catalogs and with other well known pieces in similar style and the answering of many questions on privately owned works. There are also gallery tours for visitors given to groups by special appointment.

Miss Harris, who will be introduced by Mrs. T. W. Croxton, Art and Drama chairman, will bring with her films of oriental collections.

Newspaper Story Proves Age For Sedalia Woman

"(Editor's Note: All names, personal facts and other information about claimants under the social security act are, of course, confidential an deannot be used except with the expressed permission of the persons involved. In this case Mrs. Mabel Cardwell of Sedalia, Mo., formerly of Quincy, has given the social security administration specific permission to use her name and other facts in the hope that this news story may be of value and interest to other social insurance claimants.)

"A newspaper story of the Iroquois theatre fire in Chicago on Dec. 30, 1903, in which 600 persons lost their lives, has enabled Mrs. Mabel Cardwell of Sedalia, Mo., formerly of Quincy, to establish her correct age to qualify for social security insurance benefits.

"Ordinarily persons eligible for social security insurance benefits are able to prove their correct age without difficulty through other relatives, the family Bible or by other means.

"However, this was not possible in Mrs. Cardwell's case. She had no surviving relatives or childhood friends to testify to her age. Neither was there any insurance papers or a family Bible.

"In fact, for a time it seemed that Mrs. Caldwell would be unable to qualify for the insurance benefits because of the lack of proof of her age.

"Then she recalled a story of the Iroquois theatere fire which had appeared in the old Quincy Herald which told of the death of her mother and also erroneously listed her among the victims. She also recalled her age was given as 23 years in the newspaper article.

"Social security officials at Sedalia communicated with Justin Wagy, manager of the Quincy field office, asking his assistance in verifying the age of Mrs. Cardwell. A search of the old files of the Quincy Herald by Mr. Wagy and LaVerne Bassinger, of the local social security office staff brought to light the article recalled by Mrs. Cardwell.

"It developed that Mrs. Cardwell ,then Miss Mabel Evans, and her mother, Mrs. Margaret Evans, were in the Iroquois theatre in Chicago that afternoon when fire swept through the structure, causing the deaths of hundreds, many of whom were suffocated in their seats.

"Others were trampled to death or pinned under falling timbers and masonry. As the dead were removed from the ruins of the theater, bodies were carried into adjoining buildings and laid out in rows for identification.

"The body of Mrs. Evans was among those taken to an improvised morgue. Miss Evans also was taken to the morgue and was believed dead until a nurse examining the bodies found her to be still alive. When the newspaper article was written it was believed the daughter had also been a victim of the halocause and her name and age was listed among the dead.

"Thus the newspaper article had a strange but fortunate aftermath for Miss Evans. Following the fire Miss Evans returned to Quincy, but in the years that followed her father, Jack Evans, a railroad conductor, died and other relatives died or moved elsewhere. Miss Evans went to Sedalia, Mo., where she attended a business college, found employment and worked for several years until she married Thomas Cardwell.

"Recently Mrs. Cardwell became eligible for old age insurance benefits under the social security law, but it was necessary to prove her age. The newspaper story containing her age at the time of the Iroquois fire was sufficient proof for applying for her insurance claim."

White Breasted Robin Returns To Frank T. Johnson Home

Even if they looked half frozen and as if they wished they had waited awhile longer during those few cold days, the robin red breats are back in almost everybody's yard now, at least one or two of them, but Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Johnson, 1615 South Beacon avenue, think they have a robin of real distinction. Their robin has a white breast instead of a red breast and white wings —in fact, said Mrs. Johnson, it looks almost entirely white when it flies.

Early last spring the white breasted robin was noticed at the bird feeder in Johnson's yard and he stayed there until summer when the other robins had all come, then he disappeared. This year he is back again, all alone as he was last year, and is hopping around making himself at home.

Many save bread crumbs and various things to feed the birds, and one woman buys an extra loaf of bread in the winter time every week because she uses so much of her bread to feed the birds. They gather at her back door, about her breakfast time every morning and if she is a little late they begin in their chirping voices to tell her about it. She keeps a pan of water filled for them, too, and she was amused one of the cold mornings when the water had frozen in the pan to see a bluejay telling her off when he couldn't get a drink. He would peck on the ice, shake himself furiously and fuss in a loud, angry tone, finally he gave up and flew away.

Tall Gorillas Called Myth

PASADENA, Calif.—(AP)—David P. Willoughby was intrigued by tall tales told by African hunters about 9-foot gorillas that inhabited certain sections of the Belgian Congo. So the California Institute of Technology paleontologist went to work, measuring hundreds of gorilla bones, checking photographs and reports by expeditions.

His conclusion: Gorillas are no taller than people. In a report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science Willoughby said the tallest reliably reported height for a gorilla is 6 feet 2 inches, although the animals often weigh more than 500 pounds.

Marines Landed in Iwo Jima Just Five Years Ago

By Mill Ross

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—Five years ago today a tiny Pacific island became forever a landmark in American history. It was the 19th of February, 1945, that the Marines landed at Iwo Jima.

Bald Mt. Suribachi—atop which was snapped the famous photograph—still dominates the scene today. Windswept beaches remain dotted with wrecked landing craft. Here and there you can spot what was a Japanese pillbox.

The rows of white crosses are still there, too.

But Iwo Jima—on D-Day plus five years—has settled into history. Nothing much happens there, and only a handful of bored garrison troops remain. The island serves largely as a weather station.

Today, however, imagine you are a Marine who fought at Iwo. How would you write of the battle? Would you begin at H-Hour?

26 Day Campaign

When the Marines first hit the beaches, shortly after nine o'clock D-Day morning, they expected to take the porkchop-shaped island in about 72 hours of hard fighting. The campaign raged for 26 days and claimed 19,938 American casualties — killed, wounded and missing. Upwards of 23,000 Japanese were slain.

Men of the Fourth and Fifth Marine Divisions made the initial assault landings. They carved out a precarious beachhead on the eastern shore of the island. Navy and air force bombardments had pummeled Iwo's defenses for 62 consecutive days.

Before noon the Marines had smashed through heavy defenses to move inland about 500 yards. The beachhead extended some 4,500 yards northward from the base of Mt. Suribachi. Some 7,000 Americans were ashore.

More Severe Fighting

Resistance was light the first morning contrasted to the savage fighting yet to come. Japanese Lieut. Gen. Tadamichi Guribayshi had expected the main assault to fall on the west beaches. By noon, however, he realived his mstake, the defense tightned to set the stage for what became perhaps the fiercest combat in World War II.

A hail of mortar shells fell from Mt. Suribachi. Unceasing small arms fire barked from a network of pillboxes and trenches at the base of the volcano. Artillery shells constantly dropped from positions on the high ground to the north.

For the first time, the Marines knew how tough Iwo really was going to be.

By nightfall of D-Day elements of the Fifth Division had punched across the island at its narrowest point. Units of the Fourth had pushed up the steep slope from the beaches and had taken the fringe of the first of three airstrips—the prime objective of the entire operation.

Long Line of Marines

Down of D-plus-one found the Marine lines stretching from the hills at the north of the beachhead, southwtrd to Suribachi and acrdoss the island. Three days later the situation was almost the same—except Suribachi had been taken and the stars and stripes snapped in the early spring winds. the ground, however, was measured by feet.

Thousands more Marines came ashore. The Third Division had been called into action by Lieut. Gen. H. M. (Howlin' Mad) Smith.

An unending stream of supplies piled up on the beaches. The skies were almost black at times with airpower. The big guns of the Nacy ponnded the dug-in Japs on a non-stop schedule. Progress on the ground, however, was measured in feet.

Three days after the landing the big push began.

For more than half a century the Japanese had fortified Iwo for just such an event as this. It seemed that no matter haw hard you fought, how much steel you threw at him, the enemy was always shooting back from concrete dugouts and gun emplacements.

On Into Weeks

Now, in writing about Iwo five years later, you find hours blend into days and days into weeks. You merely remember what happened—not when it hapened. Or how. You must look at official battle reports for dates and figures.

You do remember, however, why Iwo Jima was important.

It is the key island of three in the so-called volcano group, halfway between Guam and Tokyo. When the decision was made to take Iwo, American B-29s were striking the Japanese homeland from bases on Guam Saipan and Tinian.

Iwo Jima—with its three airfields—straddled their route to Japan. Jananese interceptors from Iwo plagued the B-29s' return flights, and Iwo's radar and radios flashed advance warnings to the target areas.

Used As Protection

Iwo Jima was needed, too, as a haven for shot-up homeward-bound bombers. In our hands, the island also would protect the flank of soon-to-come landings at Okinawa and the planned assault on the Japanese homeland itself.

If you were writing of Iwo today you'd probably recall the end of the campaign as vividly as the beginning.

Skies were overcast the day the Marines started leaving Iwo. You crossed the island for the last time and saw why it had been so tough. You walked down the steep slopes and the black volcano sand filled your shoes. You walked past the cemeteries where some 4,000 Marines were buried.

Perhaps you remembered some remarks of Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine when he dedicated the cemetery of his third Marine division:

Victory Never In Doubt

"Victory was never in doubt," the general said. "Its cost was. And of the cost to us in quality! No one will ever understand that, who did not fight side by side with those who fell."

Then you boarded the ship.

You said to yourself: "I hope I never see that damned place again."

A formation of Mustang fighters, fresh back from a sweep over Tokyo, buzzed the airstrip and peeled off to land. The drome of northbound B-29s floated through the dark clouds. Suribachi was faintly visible through the haze, and yu could just make out the flag flying on its peak.

The Dynamic Little Pump

On just looking at the above picture, it might look like the hand pump did an awful lot of pumping—that's what the photographer said too. On checking up though, it was discovered that the Maumee river had flooded over a park in Grand Rapids, Ohio. (NEA Telephoto)

Mackenzie's Column

By Dewitt Mackenzie
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

That hardy perennial—the call for a meeting of Russia, Britain and America in the interests of peace—is again in bloom and is being viewed with mixed emotions.

None other than Britain's Winston Churchill raised this question during a speech in his general election campaign. He suggested a Big Three meeting on the "highest level" to try for agreement on atomic control and a truce in the East-West cold war.

Hard hitting British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin promptly dubbed Churchill's proposal a political "stunt", and said agreement should be pursued through the atomic committee of the United Nations. Apropos of Bevin's charge, observers noted that if Churchill's Conservative party should be returned to power he would in natural course be prime minister again. As head of government he would be in position to initiate such a parley, and this thought might attract votes now.

Others Advocate Action

However, others beside Churchill are advocating action. Newspapers on both sides of the Atlantic are editorializing vigorously pro and con.

President Truman at his news conference yesterday threw cold water on the idea of a Big Three meeting abroad. He reiterated that he doesn't intend to go outside the United States to meet with Stalin or any other chief of state.

Replying to a question whether he thought the time had come to see Stalin, the President said he did not.

However, the President said he would be glad to see anyone who wants to come to Washington to consult him. He declared the American door is always open to international negotiation for control of atomic weapons and he hinted that he still had in mind a possible special peace mission to Russia at some future time.

Russia Still Spreads Communism

Only last week Secretary of State Acheson, in a sensational pronouncement of foreign policy, rejected all suggestions for new American peace appeals to Russia. Instead he based U.S. anti-Communist strategy squarely on a policy of power.

Moscow has given no sign that it desires to call off its cold war. On the contrary the evidence indicates that the Soviet Union is going all out in its drive to spread Communism. And what else can we expect, with Russia holding her gains in Eastern Europe and making sweeping advances in the Asiatic theatre?

Presumably Marshal Stalin would receive a peace mission courteously in Moscow and would enter discussions with it. But there is no reason to believe that such a conference would achieve peace.

On the contrary, many close observers believe that Russia would interpret such a move by the Western powers as an act of appeasement.

Any move which might be interpreted as appeasement at this juncture might easily be disastrous. However, this fact shouldn't prevent our taking advantage of every legitimate opening to achieve peace.

Rev. Brook To Speak

Rev. F. B. Brook will speak at Jones Holy Temple Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

The Series Sixty Special Sedan

..All Dramatically Restyled...and Powered by Cadillac's Sensational New Engine!

TODAY, we are presenting, for your consideration, the finest, most beautiful motor cars we have ever been privileged to announce.

They are the new Cadillacs for 1950—and we want you to come and see them.

We not only want you to see them—but we think you should see them. For to see and inspect these wonderful creations will make you a sharper judge of all cars—and increase your motor-car wisdom in every respect.

There are four entirely new series of cars—all with wholly new bodies, and all completely restyled. We think you'll agree that nothing so sleek and dynamic and beautiful has ever been seen on the world's streets and highways. They are arrestingly and breath-takingly gorgeous—and all are distinctively Cadillac.

And not only are they advanced in beauty—but their performance is finer in every way.

Cadillac's great new high-compression engine is even smoother; it is actually quicker in acceleration; and it runs so quietly that only the indicators reveal when it is in action. It is simply wonderful to drive.

And—difficult as this will be for owners of 1949 Cadillacs to believe—the 1950 cars are even more economical to operate. Gasoline mileage really approaches that of the smaller, lowest-priced cars. It is no less than amazing that cars so big and luxurious should run so far on a gallon of gasoline.

Comfort and handling ease are also remarkably advanced. There is far finer road balance and over-all steadiness at all driving speeds. Steering is softer and more positive. Brakes are more efficient and longer-lived. The over-all satisfaction of driving—from every standpoint—is simply "out of this world."

Truly, here are cars so fine and beautiful that they deserve your personal consideration.

Make your plans now to come in and see them. You will be cordially welcome at any time.

S-C Tigers Beat M. M. A. Team 61-37

Local Cagers Have Record Of 20 Wins, 4 Defeats

The Smith-Cotton Tigers won their 20th basketball victory of the season by downing the M.M.A. team from Mexico 61 to 37 in a CEMO Conference game played on the Smith-Cotton high school court Friday night.

The victory gave the Tigers second place in the Conference with a record of 8 wins and two defeats. The victory also gave them a season record of 20 wins against four defeats.

Smith-Cotton will enter the regionals Tuesday at Boonville and have a good chance of winning the meet and going to the state tourney, if the Tigers can sharpen up some over Friday night's game. The Tigers were not up to par in the last encounter, and the Tiger reserves saw more action in that game than they have in any tilt all season.

High Pointers

Holst took high point honors again for the Tigers with a total of 17 points for the evening. He was followed by Ruffin with 15 points. Murphy, with five points led the Sedalia reserves. Doerr led the M.M.A. quintet with 17 points. Gerwe and Murray tied for second place with six points each.

Sedalia opened up in the first quarter with 18 points while limiting their opponents to two free throws. This was by far the best period for the Tigers, as they were sharp in offense and defense. Some reserves moved in before the quarter ended. Walker put the Tigers ahead at the start of the game, and the team was never topped by M.M.A. Walker and Brown hit for field goals and Holst made a charity toss before M.M.A. scored. The first Colonel score came on Doerr's free throw. This was followed by McCrary and Ruffin making two Tiger setups. Holst then made a free throw for the home team, followed by Ruffin hitting a set-up and a charity toss for Sedalia. Sterner closed the quarter for the visitors with a free throw. Lankenau completed the scoring when he made a long Sedalia set shot from the center.

Second Quarter

In the second quarter the entire Tiger first string was taken out at the beginning and stayed out until the half. Although the visitors outscored the reserves 15 to 7 to trail at the half by a 25 to 17 count, the "subs" gave a good account of themselves as they were playing against the first string M.M.A. team. Diesi opened the quarter for the visitors by making four points on a jump shot and two free throws. He was followed by his teammate, Sterner, making two jump shots. After this outburst S-C counted on free throws by Morgan and Shawver and a set shot by Murphy. Doerr then poured in two straight set ups for M.M.A. Murphy answered for Sedalia with a jump shot and a charity toss. M.M.A. then closed the half with three free throws to let the score stand at Sedalia 25, M.M.A. 17.

Colonels Make a Comeback

Sedalia's first string played the whole third quarter and only succeeded in out scoring M.M.A. by four points, 14 to 10 to let the score stand in Sedalia's favor 39 to 27. This was Sedalia's starters worst period and the M.M.A. team was playing above their heads.

In the final period, the starters mixed with the reserves on both squads and Sedalia succeeded in outscoring the visitors 22 to 12 in a wild finish to take the game 61 to 37.

After the game the biggest dance of the year took place at Convention Hall, it being the junior-senior prom.

Gremlins Win Consolation In PCAA Meet

Team Enters Sub-Regionals At Windsor

The Sacred Heart Gremlins basketball team won Consolation Honors in the P.C.A.A. tournament, Friday night at Green Ridge by defeating the Lincoln high school cagers by a score of 32 to 23.

The Gremlins and Lincoln quintet played a slow breaking game and Coach Palmer Nichols used all of his reserves in this tilt.

Tight Zone Defense

When the Gremlins went into a tight zone defense, the Lincoln team moved into the center of the court and one of the players tucked the ball under his arm and stood with it, while players on both sides visited.

It was sometime before the ball was moved, then a Lincoln player accidentally ran into Martin and was fouled. Martin then made good his free throw and play began.

At the end of the first quarter, the score stood 6 to 1 in favor of Sedalia. The Gremlins really began to move in the second quarter and at half time, held a 12 point advantage.

Reserves Move In

From then on, it was a question of what the score would be as reserves began to move in and out of both lineups. Jerry Labus was again high scorer for the Gremlins with 8 points and also played a "bang up" floor game. Goring and Christian were high scorers for the Lincoln team with 8 points each. So tight was the zone defense that the Sedalia team displayed, that the Lincoln team did not score a field goal during the first half and made only 7 during the entire game.

Gremlins To Sub-Regionals

It was the third victory in two days of play for the Sacred Heart team who will journey to Windsor Tuesday night for a game with the Knob Noster high school in the Sub-Regional Tournament. The game will start at 9 o'clock that night.

Smith-Cotton To Regionals Tuesday Night

Tigers' Foe Will Be The Fulton Cagers

The Smith-Cotton Tigers will enter the Boonville Regionals Tuesday night at 7:30 against the Fulton high school team. This is one of the sixteen regional tourneys being played in the state next week, the winners of which will go to the state tournament the following week. These regionals are for class A schools (250 students and over), only. The dividing of the schools has eliminated the necessity of the sub-regionals in class A. Sedalia won their sub-regional last year but lost out in the first round of the regional at Warrensburg to Marshall. The winner of the Boonville regional will play the winner of the Springfield regional in the first round of the state tourney.

Eight Teams in Regional

There will be eight teams in the Boonville regional. They are: Sedalia, seeded first; Boonville seeded second; Marshall seeded third, Columbia seeded fourth. The other four teams are: Saint Peters of Jefferson City; Jefferson City; Kemper, and Fulton. This is probably one of the weaker regionals in the state, and Sedalia stands a good chance to win if they hustle and play each game as they come.

Boonville is probably the only serious threat to the Tigers. They took second in the tough NEMO conference and have a good record of 19 wins and 4 losses. The number two seeded team is the only seeded squad that the Tigers have not defeated in previous games. The Boonville team will be playing on their home court and this will be a decided advantage to them. But they have the hard bracket to come through as they must play the number three seeded team before they can get to the finals. The teams are seeded on a won and lost record basis.

Team Statistics

Marshall: The Owls have had a pretty good season to date with 13-5 record. Sedalia has beaten the Owls in two previous engagements this year 43 to 20 and 53 to 39. In the second game, the Marshall five held the Tigers to a half time tie of 21 all, and could prove to be a championship threat if they get hot. Sedalia also has another score to settle with them as they beat them out in the regionals last year. Marshall will play their first round game against the Saint Peters team at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Columbia

Columbia: The fourth seeded team has a season's record of 11 wins and 8 losses. The Kewpies have suffered two defeats at the hands of the Tigers this season by the scores of 82 to 32 and 60 to 26. They placed third in the CEMO conference with a season's record in league play of 4-4. Their first round game will be against Jefferson City at 9:00 p.m. Wednesday. The winner of this game will play the winner of the Sedalia-Fulton clash at 7:30 Thursday night.

Fulton

Fulton is probably the weakest team in the tourney as they have won only two games this year while losing 16. They are the Tigers' first round opponents and could prove very dangerous as teams like that are bound to win sometime if the other squad gets over confident.

Jefferson City

Jefferson City took fourth in the CEMO conference with a 2-5 conference record. Sedalia has beaten them three times this year by scores of 40-23, 49-30, and 60-27. The Jays shouldn't prove very dangerous, but could cause trouble.

Saint Peters

Saint Peters is probably the strongest of he non-seeded teams in the tourney and should probably rate the title of darkhorse. They took third in the CEMO preseason tourney which is about the only comparison between them and Sedalia. If they get hot they can cause a lot of trouble.

Kemper

Kemper: The Yellowjackets have had a bad year and took last in the CEMO conference with a 1-9 conference record. Sedalia has beaten them twice 53 to 27 and 65 to 34, and they should prove little trouble.

The Tigers sport a 20-4 record for the season and second place in the CEMO conference with a 7-2 mark. They poured in 1,245 points in the regular season for an average of 51.9 points per game. While Sedalia was making their points they limited their opponents to 788 points and an average score per game against the Tigers of 32.8 points. If Sedalia wins the regional they will go to the state tourney for the first time in several years. The Tigers have a wonderful opportunity as they will play in the easier bracket and should be around 13 points better than any team in the regionals if they play the kind of ball they have in the past.

Schedule

The Tigers will play Fulton, Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock; Boonville vs. Kemper at 9:00 p.m.; Marshall vs. St. Peters at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday and Columbia plays Jefferson City at 9:00 p.m. Wednesday.

Be safe, be sure! Have chest X-ray Thurs., Fri., Sat., Court House, Sedalia. Adv.

Sport Scraps

(By D. Kelly Scruton)

THE dates for the Missouri State Fair are far away, but yet so close. Close enough that Roy S. Kemper, secretary, has started talking of what will be at the 1950 exposition and his tee off is Harness races. Secretary Kemper has a right to be elated over the racing program this year—his early closing dates on entries found 171 for the 1950 events compared with 141 for 1949.

Kemper also told me these entries do not include those of the Grand Circuit stake races which are the finest ever to be run on th Missouri mile. Running of the Grand Circuit in 1949, the first time for Missouri's track, saw records of every kind broken and some of the finest bred animals ever to trot or pace this track.

Even the thought of GRAND CIRCUIT seems to have something of an appeal to horse race followers, those who never before saw such a program and especially to those who follow the sport on the sport pages and in racing magazines.

If attendance this year hold up to that of the first season and the increase comes which is anticipated by those who know horse racing, then the large grandstand which looks big—will not be big enough. Missouri is taking its place in the track sport and certainly it will not be long before the State will be called upon to either enlarge or build a new grandstand or stadium.

The 1949 races proved so successful that already reservations of owners of big stables back east are making plans to attend the local program. L. A. Hawkins, Forstville, N. Y., who has entries in the various events has reserved two cabins at the Sedalia Motel, now under construction. Lawrence Shepherd of the Hanover Shoe Co., Hanover Farms, likewise has indicated by letter to Mr. Kemper he will be here with his string of horses.

IT'S almost that time again for Ma Leist, (Mrs. Henry Leist) formerly of Sedalia now of McAllen, Texas, and myself to pick our teams. Of course there is no doubt that Ma will pick the St. Louis Cards and possibly the Chicago Cubs, and mine usually is the Cardinals.

Recently several Sedalians have had time to take a vacation trip, they all went to Texas and to McAllen and saw Ma Leist. Marion and Mrs. Hall was the first; Leroy "Dutch" Kirchhofer and Mrs. Kirchhofer were next; and then Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Keuper. They all tell me Ma sends her greetings back to her many Sedalia friends and is checking up on me as to who I'm picking.

Even if I thought some other team would win the National League pennant, I would have to go along with Ma.

Incidentally if anyone cares to drop her a card, her address is 2636 W. Beaumont Ave.

THE Regional tournament at Boonville, officials have the Smith Cotton Tigers picked as the favored team to win. All because they placed second in the CEMO Conferenceein basketball. In fact a news release had the Sedalia boys all blown up as being a 15-point superiority BUT over-confidence can be an awful sharp pointed instrument to get them defeated.

I would suggest ta the boys before they take the news release too serious they sit down and do a little comparing. Smith-Cotton seasonal record is 20-4. Now take the Boonville high school cagers, they have a 19-4 record; then Marshall has 13-5; Hickman of Columbia with a 11-8.

Watch out boys who meet a stranger in Fulton in the first game, and even if you run up a big score do swell, take it in stride and win the tournament—who knows you might get another chance at Hannibal in the State tournament where it will really count again.

Grand Circuit Here Attracts Many Entries

Roy S. Kemper Has Bright Outlook For This Year's Races

The Grand Circuit racing program at the Missouri State Fair is attracting horses from the best harness racing stables in the country. To compare harness racing entries of previous seasons with those of 1950, one example is the fact there were 141 entries at the early closing entered for 1949 while at the closing time for early entries this year there are 171.

These entries do not include the regular Stake Races of the Grand Circuit program, Roy S. Kemper, secretary of the Missouri State Fair announced. In discussing the program, Mr. Kemper remarked the races this year should be better if not equal to those of 1949 at which time several track records fell by-the-boards and a world record was set.

In past years when the harness racing was not as well organized as it is under the Grand Circuit, early closing entries sometimes never reached more than 120, and those days were considered exceptionally good closing figures. At the same time they did not include as fine horses as of the present day listings.

Early Closing Events

Event No. 8. 17-Class Pace, (Robert Thornburg Trophy) $3,000.

Event No. 9. 26-Class Pace (Greater St. Louis Trophy) $2,000.

Trout Season Opens March 1

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 18 —(Special)— Indications are that large numbers of fishermen will turn out for the Missouri trout season which opens at sunrise March 1 in state parks and managed waters.

According to Abner Gwinn, Missouri's chief of parks, reservations for opening day accommodations have long been taken at the three parks: Bennett Springs, Montauk and Roaring River. He emphasized however, that this is no indication as to the number of fishermen that will be present since usually many others come prepared to camp.

Dr. G. B. Herndon, chief of the Conservation Commission's fisheries section, pointed out that waters in the three state parks are stocked with catchable size trout a few days prior to the season opening and nightly thereafter as fishing pressure demands. Other managed waters outside of state parks are stocked with catchable trout twice a year, in February and in July.

The managed waters outside state parks open March 1 are: a part of Current river below Montauk; Greer Springs branch and a part of Eleven Point river in Oregon county; Meramec Spring branch in Phelps county; Roubidoux Spring branch in Pulaski county; a portion of Indian Creek near Stella in Newton and McDonald counties; and a posted portion of Dry Creek below the mouth of Westover Spring branch in Crawford county.

In state park waters, a daily fee of fifty cents for a "trout tag" is required of each angler, in addition to the regular state fishing permit.

Trout fishing outside of state parks and managed waters does not open until May 30.

Cottontail Season Closes February 28

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 18 —(Special)— Rabbit hunters are reminded this week by the Conservation Commission that the cottontail season closes Feb. 28 to re-open May 30.

Section 29 of the Wildlife Code, pertaining to rabbit season, reads in part. "Rabbits may be taken by pistol, rifle, gun or dog from sunrise to sunset or by trap at any hour from May 30 to Oct. 31 and from Nov. 10 to Feb. 28; provided, however, that steel traps may be used only from Dec. 1 to Jan. 15 and that rabbits may be sold only from Nov. 10 to Feb. 28.

K. C. Mohawks Clash With Omaha Tonite

Omaha Holds No. 1 Spot In Hockey Standings

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 18—The Hatfield and McCoys of the United States Hockey league—Omaha and Kansas City—will renew their ice feud at 8:15 o'clock Sunday night in the Pla-Mor arena. It will be the next to the last game with the Knights. They clash again on Wednesday night, March 15. Omaha is the team which went from fifth place in the standing within a month and streaked to a long winning streak for the top spot which they still hold. The Knights probably will win the pennant now, but Kansas City is very much in the running for a play-off berth. Omaha finally was stopped by the Mohawks, 6 to 3, the last time they played here. It was the first loss during the month of January and the first in 1950 for the Knights. Omaha is still winning handily over opponents but when the Knights and Mohawks clash there are a lot of thrills for the followers of the ice sport. Omaha has a lot of rookies and three brother combinations on the roster

Brother Combination

The Wilsons, Giesebrechts and the Bruneteaus are the brother combinations on the squad. The Bruneteau's are of French extraction. Another Frenchman on the Omaha squad is Marcel Pronovost. When Pronovost joined the squad the first part of the season he was worried how he would get along because he knew no English. But as luck would have it, Mud and Eddie speak French and they have been a great help to the sensational rookie, who is playing great hockey for the Knights.

Another thing fans can look forward to is a real battle between two fine goalies—Irish Bill Brennan and the Knights Sugar Jim Henry of the Mohawks. Jim, incidentally hasn't missed a game this season and his nickname really should be "Durable Jim" instead of Sugar Jim. Brennan has one of the best goals—against average in the league and the first time the youngster gained a shutout he went to the dressing room and thanked each Omaha player individually. What a great gesture for a rookie netminder.

It all points to a thrilling sixty minutes of action.

Otterville Cagers Won Cooper County Tourney

The Otterville high school boys basketball team defeated the Pilot Grove team by a score of 42 to 44, to win the annual Cooper County Basketball tournament held at Bunceton, February 7-10.

Before playing the final game of the tournament against Pilot Grove, the Otterville boys defeated Prairie Home 63-57 and Boonville Catholic high school 54-37.

Mat Action In Sedalia To Be Resumed

Top Talent Will Be In Ring This Wednesday Night

WRESTLING SCHEDULE

Main Event

"Wild Bill" Longson vs. Mike Sharp
Salt Lake City, U. Hamilton, Ont.
Two falls out of 3—90-minute limit.

Semi-Windup

Lee Henning vs. Vic Holbrook
Buffalo, N. Y. Hollywood, Cal.
Two falls out of 3—45-minute limit.

Special Event

Vic Christy vs. Tommy O'Toole
Los Angeles, Cal. Boston, Mass.
One fall with a 30-minute limit.

Time: 8:30 Wednesday night.
Place: National Guard Armory.
Auspicies: Pettis County Post 16 American Legion.

Wednesday night Pettis County Post 16, American Legion resumes their weekly wrestling matches, in accordance with an announcement by Promoter Pearl Christy. The schedule calls for three events, any one of which could be classified as a main event as to the talent signed in each affair. The special or opening event of the card begins at 8:30 o'clock, Wednesday night in the National Guard Armory, Ninth street and Ohio avenue.

Incidentally, all of the six wrestlers stand six feet or more and weigh from 228 to 252 pounds. Each and every man is considered among the top talent of the country and has headlined many wrestling shows in various sections of the country in recent months.

Topping the list is the main event which brings together "Wild Bill" Longson, Salt Lake City, U., and Mike Sharp, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada. Longson tips the scale hand at 240 while his opponent sends it circling to 252 pounds. Big Mike, a seasoned wrestler squares off against one of the roughest of the ring in Longson, who has been featured many times in the St. Louis rings. The Canadian has a record string of victories of fourteen and one draw and Longson expects to break his luck.

Favorite Grappler Returns

Sedalia fans will be glad to hear Vic Holbrook, well known to the ringsiders of the local sport, is returning to this area and meets Lee Henning of Buffalo. Holbrook still lists his home as Hollywood or Van Nuys, Calif. Little need to be said about Holbrook and his type of wrestling. Hennings compares with Bob Wagner, who has appeared here and is known as one of the most vicious wrestlers of the square circle, and specializes in the knee drop and bruising headlocks.

The flying scissors expert Vic Christy who has been before local fans many times in recent years, will clash with Tommy O'Toole, the fighting Irishman of Boston. Christy hails from Los Angeles. Neither boy will hold any advantage in the weight department and both are leading exponents in the execution of leg and body scissors grips.

Oklahoma Defeats Kansas In Track

NORMAN, Okla., Feb. 18—(AP)—Oklahoma overcame an 11-point deficit in the final two events to defeat Kansas, 52½ to 51½ in the opening Big Seven Conference indoor track meet here today.

Oklahoma's mile relay team came home first to pick up five points in the next to last event. Mervin McConnell and Dick Jones finished one-two in the broad jump to gain the needed points.

McConnell won the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet on his final attempt, for a new dual meet record. Two other records were broken and three others were established in events contested for the first time.

Jack Greenwood of Kansas was high scorer with nine points. He finished first in the low hurdles, second in the high hurdles and third in the 50-yard dash.

Indians Terrified Whites, But Seldom Took Scalps

(By the State Historical Society of Missouri at Columbia, Floyd C. Shoemaker, - secretary.)

The peaceful quiet of the pioneer French village of Ste. Genevieve was suddenly shattered by the shrill cry of an Indian horseback rider coming full gallop down the bank of Gabouri creek. The piercing yell had scarcely died away when other redskins took it up and a brawling, fowdy, drunken band of Indians swarmed through the village streets. At the first sign of the uproar, citizens of Ste. Genevieve gathered their families behind hastily locked doors and the heavy solid wooden shutters on the windows of their homes were drawn and bolted. Others took refuge in a log fort.

The insolence of the drunken Indians, the Peorias, Loups, Kickapoos, Chickasaws, annd Cherokees who ran shouting and screaming wildly through the town, is inconceivable. The Indians sometimes made themselves masters of the village and completely terrified the inhabitants. It can hardly be imagined now that such conduct would not lead to bloodshed. The boisterous redskins, however, seldom touched the whites and the well protected windows, the heavy doors and high picket fences around Ste. Genevieve homes generally provided a barrier against bloodshed.

Usually Peaceful

Between these hair-raising escapades, Ste. Genevieve enjoyed relative peace and quiet when the neighboring Indian tribes were content to remain sober and enjoy the trade and protection of the indulgent French who wanted only their peltry and fur. Often French and Indian children played together and the white lads learned shooting with bows and arrows and picked snatches of the Indian language.

A band of Peorias which lived near Ste. Genevieve in 1802 was described as a pack of "indolent drunkards and thieves" who would engage in hunting only to procure spirits. The rest of their time was spent eating, drinking, smoking and dancing. One French observor reported the Peorias seldom hunted for fear of clashes with other nearby Indian tribes.

Among the other tribes which periodically harassed Ste. Genevieve were the Osages, who generally refused liquor but were notorious horse thieves. Hunting and war constituted their only exercise and although they lived on the border of civilization, the Osages rejected civilized customs and dress. The Osages were terrors because of their predatory habits all over southern Missouri, but they rarely shot or killed whites.

The Most Peaceful

Most peaceful of all the Missouri Indian tribes were the Shawnees and the Delawares who were close friends of the French and seldom molested the Americans.

In spite of their predatory habits and their well recognized ability to terrify the whites, the Indians in southern Missouri remained subdued and did not provoke large Indian wars. The redskins were astonished at the white man's ability to raise large companies of mounted militia against them and confined their warlike activities to unorganized fighting in small bands designed to scare and overawe individual settlers and their families.

In addition to their horses, the Indians often stole white men's clothes which they favored over their own garments. In one case a band of Kickapoos overtook a wedding party enroute from Washington county to a Catholic priest in Ste. Genevieve. The caravan of a dozen men and women, including the prospective bride and groom, was stopped near Ste. Genevieve and robbed of all their provisions for a wedding feast and all of their clothes Left with only their horses, members of the party continued on to Ste. Genevieve where temporary garments were provided by local residents and the ceremony was performed according to schedule.

Safe Landing By Survivors Plane

FORT WORTH, Feb. 18—(AP)—The C-54 carrying survivors of the B-36 crash in British Columbia landed safely at Carswell Air Force base here at 10:33 p. m.

A crowd of wives, children and other relatives had been waiting at the field for over an hour for the arrival of the survivors.

Heavy Damage In Fire On Farm

Workmen knocked the empty silo down. Jim Kelly, farm manager, said the burning silo will be dynamited tomorrow so the smouldering fire can be extinguished in the ensilage.

Kelly said he could not give an estimate of the damage. He said the fire may have started in wiring for heat lamps installed to keep the sows warm.

A lot depends on him. He has to be a good man, skillful and well trained. He should be well paid—and he is—as are other telephone employees. (Their average earnings are shown at the right.)

But wages tell only part of the story. All telephone employees after 20 years' service can look forward to a pension at age 65 of at least $100 a month, including social security, and pensions to many will be higher.

In addition, he gets sickness benefits and death benefits up to a year's full pay, at no cost to him. He has seven holidays a year with pay and vacations with pay up to three weeks.

Chances to advance are excellent, because promotions are made from within the company.

Judged by any standards you may choose —wages, benefits, pensions, or working conditions—telephone jobs are good jobs. Yet union leaders are demanding a fourth-round of wage boosts.

Since telephone wages and working conditions are already among the best, these union demands are obviously unfair to telephone customers who must pay the bill.

AVERAGE EARNINGS OF TELEPHONE PEOPLE HERE

Fully Experienced Central Office Repairmen — $78 A WEEK — $4,071 A YEAR

Plant craftsmen with five years' service: $64 a week, or $3,340 a year. One year's service: $43 a week, or $2,244 a year.

Fully Experienced Operators — $46 A WEEK — $2,401 A YEAR

Operators with five years' service: $44 a week, or $2,296 a year. One year's service: $39 a week, or $2,035 a year.

Fully Experienced Business Office Women (Service Representatives) — $49 A WEEK — $2,557 A YEAR

Business office women with five years' service: $45 a week, or $2,349 a year. One year's service: $38 a week, or $1,983 a year.

The above figures include basic wages for a 40-hour week plus overtime and extra pay for night, Sunday, and holiday work.

All telephone employees get regular scheduled pay increases from the time they start until they reach the top rate for their jobs. Under present contracts, which are still in effect, three-fourths of our people will get such increases during 1950.

Epworth Methodist Church Parsonage

The new parsonage of Epworth Methodist church Broadway and Engineer, which the people of that church have had built for their pastor, the Rev. Ralph Emerson Hurd, has been completed and open house will be held at 7:00 o'clock Tuesday night to which all friends of the church are invited.

All will first assemble at the church and will then go to the new home where a number of the church women will show them through. Others will preside over the guests books. After going through the home the guests may return to the church where young matrons of the congregation, in formals, will serve refreshments.

The new home which faces the north and is located just west of the church is the ranch house type built of red brick and landscaped with evergreens. A curving cement walk leads to the front door which is of light oak with three small panes, of glass.

Former Members Send Gifts

As the button is pushed to ring the bell chimes may be heard and these were a gift of the family of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Weber, who were members of the church until they moved to DeSoto, Mo., a few years ago. The gift was in memory of Mrs. Weber's mother, the late Mrs. Elizabeth Boyle, a faithful member of Epworth church.

The living room is long with two picture windows in front, one on each side of door. The windows are designed with three smaller panes on either side of the large panes. In the living room is a large fireplace in dark red tile with light oak mantel. The natural light oak woodwork is used throughout the home with doors of solid wood, all in one piece and brass knobs. The walls are a pastel green with darker green draperies.

Cosy Study

An archway leads to a small hall and at the back of the house is the pastor's study with walls of mulberry shade and windows on two sides. Here are built-in bookshelves and a large closet. The study is on the east and from it the hall leads to the guest room which is in wedgewood blue with two large windows. At the west side of the house, in the rear, is the pastor's bedroom which is in dubonnet and here also are two large windows. In both bedrooms are spacious closets, and between the bedrooms in the hallway is a large linen closet. At the extreme west end of the home is the bathroom, all in white. Floors over the entire house are hard wood.

Kitchen In Front

The kitchen is in the front of the house directly off the living room to the west. The window over the sink looks out onto Broadway and on either side of the window are built in cabinets and shelves. The drainboards are of white tile and are built up as high as the cabinets. There is no color, except one black tile on each side corresponding with the black and white squares of the linoleum. Below the sink are also built-in cabinets. Next to the kitchen is the utility room in which are the furnace and hot water heater. The room is white and has four doors, the one leading to the living room, one to the garage, and two outside doors one leading to the front yard and one to the back yard.

The lighting is complete with three way switches all over the house that the lights may be turned off and on from anywhere about the home. Too, there are electrical wall receptacles over the entire house, with a number of them in each room.

Travelogue Is Given To Loan Association

E. C. Nelson Chief Speaker Before 125 At Dinner-Meeting

One-hundred and fifteen members and guests attended a dinner-meeting of the National Farm Loan Association, Saturday afternoon in the Ambassador Room of the Bothwel lhotel, with the president, D. L. Kauffman, in charge of the meeting.

Three board members were re-elected, H. L. Garnett of Lincoln, A. G. Lenz of Boonville and L. E. Durley of Hughesville.

Edgar C. Nelson of Boonville was the principal speaker. William A. Dickison, Association Service Division of Federal aLnd Bank gave a brief talk and reviewed the history of the Federal Land Bank.

Told of European Trip

An unusually interesting travelogue of his trip to Europe was given by Mr. Nelson in which he told of the two months spent in seven European countries and of his impressions of those countries and their people.

Seeing things as most Missourians would see them for the first time Mr. Nelson gave his impressions from the time he left New York on the SS Queen Mary for Southhampton, England, until he returned on the Queen Elizabeth from Cherbourg, France.

England he found to be a beautiful land, a fascinating hodgepodge of heaths and moors, hills and valleys, factories, grasslands and farms. There is history, antiquity, traditions, dignity wherever you go, he said, and the children are well behaved.

Has Dutch Cleanser Look

Holland, Mr. Nelson said, has the Dutch Cleanser look. The Dutch and the Swiss are the smartest people he visited in Europe. "About the only difference between them" a recent magazine writer declared, "Is that the Dutch can't yodel and the Swiss won't wear wooden shoes." Nearly one-half of Holland is below sea level, the speaker said, and water is an ever-present, ever-threatening problem. The Dutch have rendered it harmless by their fabulous chain of dikes and put it to work on their 5,000 miles of canals. When the Nazis blew up most of the dikes the Dutch rolled up their sleeves after liberation and started all over again. Everybody in Holland rides bicycles and they wind in and out between trucks and cars but nobody gets hurt, Mr. Nelson said, and there are flowers from early spring until late fall, something about the Dutch earth makes it burst with flowers.

Brussels Hub of Belgium

Belgium is a tiny land, the speaker said, of which Brussels is the hub of the wheel. It is full of factories and Belgium farmers rival Dutch and Danes in getting results from the soil, he said. Mr Nelson found the people of Belgium friendly, kindly and industrious. They love music, he said, and know how to have fun with little effort and cost.

Switzerland has about everything, Mr. Nelson said, mountains, lakes, forests, lovely little farms, electric trains, castles, chalets, old age pensions, a vast army of precision workers and a government that is run by the people at a cost that is not prohibitive. The tourist business is the fourth biggest business. All hotels cooperate to give the best service possible, and every citizen exerts himself to extend the utmost courtesy and helpfulness, he said.

Visiting Italy he was most impressed with Venice which he said could be pictured as a city half the size of Kansas City with all the streets and alleys full of water. The gondolas by the hundreds cast a spell of romance over all tourists.

The strangest city he visited Mr. Nelson said was Pompeii which was destroyed by Vesuvius when the fine what ash of the eruption consolidated with water and embalmed everything it covered but in 1594 the city was discovered by engineers.

France, Mr. Nelson said, is the largest country in Europe next to Soviet Russia. It is a land of small farmers. It has a flair for the artistic that finds its highest expression in Paris where there is art unsurpassed, charm and local color wherever you go, he said, and is the supreme court of high fashion.

Mr. Nelson concluded his talk by telling a little about some of the interesting people he met on the trip.

Fined For Careless Driving

Robert Eugene Breshears, LaMonte, arrested by the state patrol on a charge of careless and imprudent driving pleaded guilty to Magistrate W. M. Ilgenfritz in court, Saturday morning, and was fined $25 and costs. He paid the fine and costs.

'Kiss And Kick' Battle High In Skies In Chartered Plane

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—(AP)—A wild "kiss and kick" battle between a statuesque blonde and the co-pilot of a chartered New York-to-Florida plane flying at an altitude of 3,000 feet was reported to police here Friday.

Co-pilot T. C. Sallee, 32, who flew with the late Bill Odom on a round-the-world trip, said the struggle lasted 15 minutes and threatened to send the plane crashing out of control.

Finally, the pilot, K. H. Dubanowich, turned the plane back on its south-bound flight and made a shaky, unscheduled landing at Washington National Airport.

The blonde was identified by a driver's license as Miss Willie Jane Frost, 38, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Los Angeles. She was taken to a hospital in nearby Alexandria, Va.

Co-pilot Sallee said the woman chartered the plane in New York for a trip to Miami. She slept most of the time during the first part of the trip, but about 10 minutes south of Washington she woke up hysterical. Sallee said she began kicking the back of his seat facing the controls.

"She reached around my neck and pulled me back. Then she started kissing me," he said.

"I saw a chance to grab her hands when she started kicking at the windows, but I couldn't hold on. Finally I managed to get into the rear seat and hold her down but she kept kicking and struggling.

"She asked me if I loved her," Sallee said, "and hoping to quiet her, I would say, 'Madly . . . '

Fearful of Crash

"That seemed to quiet her for a while, but then she would start in again. She was throwing herself all over the plane, trying to open windows, trying to grab the wheel, trying to open the door."

Sallee said he feared her struggles and wild lunges in the little plane would throw it out of control as they came in for a landing.

"It was an anxious moment," he said.

The co-pilot said when it became apparent that the woman could not be subdued, Pilot Dubanowich signaled the Washington airport tower to have an ambulance waiting.

His message read:

"Have malfunctioning passenger aboard. Have police and ambulances standing by. Am going to land."

The single-engine plane landed at 4:55 a. m.

In Selma, Ala., Miss Frost's brother-in-law, who asked not to be identified, said her mother, Mrs. Norma Frost, left for Washington by Eastern Air Line plane early today.

He said Mr. Frost was "moderately wealthy" and that her daughter was an accomplished sculptress and horsewoman.

"It's luck," he observed, "that there was a co-pilot in that plane because she's a very strong young lady."

For the past 14 years, he continued, Miss Frost has made her home with her mother here and at Coral Gables, Fla., where they own a 20-acre horse ranch.

He said the blonde was graduated from the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts and from the University of Pennsylvania.

Co-pilot Sallee, who is employed by the Odom Aircraft Corp., at Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., said he and the pilot were called to Laguardia Airport, New York, at 2 a. m. today for the charter flight.

He said the woman wanted to fly immediately to Palm Beach, Fla., explaining that it was urgent for her to get in touch with a man there who knew the whereabouts of a friend who was dying.

The airmen agreed to make the flight for $400. She paid $80 and said the rest would be paid when she saw her family in Florida, Sallee related.

Before the take-off from Laguardia, she displayed an Eastern Airlines ticket she had bought for a flight at 8 a. m. Friday, but said she could not wait that long.

Claims Killing As Accidental

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Feb. 18—(AP)—Illinois state polist said Friday that Harry Dennis, 34, of Yale, Okla., told them his younger brother accidentally shot and killed a fellow Oklahoman Wednesday on a hunting trip.

The brother is William Dennis, 22. The two are held in separate jails under murder charges, pending arrival of Oklahoma authorities. Both have waived extradition.

The Dennis brothers were arrested last night by state policemen Frank Willmont and William Monken. They were at the home of William's mother-in-law, Mrs. Alvina Hendricks, who lives at nearby East St. Louis, Ill.

Willmont and Monken disclosed they have a double barrel .20 gauge Belgium-make shotgun which the elder Dennis said killed Sweeden. Harry Dennis is a veteran of World War II.

"There's nothing to it," the elder Dennis was quoted by the two patrolmen as saying. "The gun went off in Bill's (William) hands as they were getting into the car. There wasn't any argument."

The latter statement conflicted with the murder accounts from Oklahoma.

Railroad Crossing Warning that Warns

NEW YORK, Feb. 19—(AP)—Ralph L. Holcombe of Culver City, Calif., proposes a railroad crossing warning that will figuratively rattle the teeth of autoists. He says that drivers sometimes fail to see warning signals that some mistake red for green.

But that no one is likely to miss a signal that suddenly jars him.

For this he has designed a series of bars, set in the pavement, flush and smooth when the dangerous crossing ahead is safe. When the warning signal goes on, the bars rise up a little—not enough to trip pedestrians. But to an auto they feel like riding over a washboard.

Steps For Hiring Of 'Rain Maker'

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—(AP)—Mayor William O'Dwyer announced Friday he had taken steps to hire a "rain maker" in a despr-at attempt to secure more than a billion gallons of water daily needed here before summer.

The mayor issued his statement after Albany's Mayor Erastus Corning had said he would oppose O'Dwyer's tinkering with the heavens.

Corning said he was going to learn if the state water power and control commission had the authority to regulate water production by artificial means and if it didn't he urged legislation giving it that power.

Yesterday's seventh dry Thursday, an attempt to build up reserves by getting citizens to conserve water, proved a bust.

It was "the worst day yet," according to Water Commissioner Stephen J. Carney.

"Commissioner Carney," the mayor said, "has requested permission to procure an outstanding meterologist to conduct a study of rainmaking. I have asked Commissioner Carney to proceed immediately with all necessary arrangements."

Red Cross Honors 159 Persons For 'Meritorious Acts' in 1949

By NEA Service

WASHINGTON — (NEA)—One day last summer, 12-year-old Gwen Anglesey,of Rigby, Ida., heard excited cries from the bank of a nearby canal. A neighbor's youngster, two-year-old Dickie Bryce, had fallen into the water was being carried downstream.

Gwen jumped into the canal, swam out to the boy and brought him to shore. Then, noting that he wasn't breathing, she applied artificial respiration and succeeded in reviving the child. She was credited with saving his life.

For her quick action and skillful use of swimming and first-aid techniques, Gwen was one of 159 persons who received American Red cross certificates of merit in 1949. The award, limited to those who have successfully completed a Red Cross course in first aid, swimming or life saving, is given for performing a meritorius act in saving or attempting to save a life.

A few weeks later and a thousand miles away, Richard A. Sedin, a public utilities employe in St. Paul, Minn., arrived on the scene shortly after five men had been hit by an automobile while waiting to board a street car.

Sedin noticed that one victim was unconscious and bleeding profusely from a face cut. He applied pressure to stop the bleeding and maintained it until a police ambulance arrived. Doctors said his action saved the victim's life.

In Tuscaloosa, Ala., high school student Bobbie Jack Bradberry applied artificial respiration to an electrocuted baby for 30 minutes before the child began to breathe. The year-old youngster had touched a live wire and apparently was dead when Bobbie Jack began his first aid treatment. He and Sedin also received Red Cross awards.

Instituted in 1928, the awards are designed to recognize outstanding instances of prompt and skillful use of knowledge gained in Red Cross first aid or water safety courses. The life-saving act must be conclusively proved before the award is given.

* * *

Recognition has also been given for knowing what to do in an emergency.

In a freak accident near Pasco, Wash., an 11-year-old boy was impaled on the hood ornament of an automobile. Some eight inches of steel were buried deep in his abdomen. When Bruce Lee, an emergency ambulance attendant, arrived at the scene he noted that there was little bleeding and realized that serious injury might result if the youngster was moved.

For an hour and a half, while doctors were being located and brought to the scent, Lee resisted the pressure of an angry crowd of spectators demanding that he move the boy. When the doctors arrived, his judgment in not doing so was vindicated. The youngster and a portion of the car were taken to a hospital and the ornament removed by surgery. Lee was given full credit for minimizing the injury and possibly saving the boy's life.

The 1949 group was award winners is a good cross-section of America. Included are housewives, industrial workers, farmers, students, members of the armed forces and law enforcement officers. One certificate recipient is a brigadier-general; another, an Army corporal. A father was recognized for saving his son. A storekeeper saved a boy who was choking on a candy jaw-breaker.

And a national forest foreman received the award for saving his own life. His prompt application of pressure to a severed facial artery saved him from bleeding to death during a 45-minute trip to a doctor's office.

In all last year, 138 men or boys and 21 women or girls were honored by the Red Cross for their life-saving efforts. They came from 36 states, Hawaii and the District of Columbia.

GWEN AND DICKIE: At first, he wasn't breathing.

Truman Preaches "Excelent Sermon" to Methodist Ministers

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—You have to have a card-index system these days to keep up with the accusations of certain Congressmen regarding Communists in the federal government.

Unfortunately the average citizen doesn't have time to keep a card index, so gets confused over harum-scarum Senator Joe McCarthy's recent accusation that there were 57 card-carrying Communists in the State Department.

When the Senator from Wisconsin finally was pinned down, he could produce not 57, but only four names of State Department officials whom he claimed were Communists.

A careful scrutiny of these names is important. Of the four accused by McCarthy, one, Dr. Harlow Shapley, at no time worked for the State Department. Two, Gustavo Duran and Mrs. Mary Jane Keeney, resigned four years ago; the fourth, John Service, was reinstated after a prolonged and careful investigation and after virtual apologies to him for ever questioning his loyalty. He is now serving with the most anti-Russian of all American diplomats, Loy Henderson, U.S. ambassador to India.

But there is even more interesting background behind Senator McCarthy's charges. Somewhat the same charges were made three years ago by another Republican, this one Congressman Bartel Jonkman of Michigan, just across the lake from McCarthy in Wisconsin.

On Feb. 26, 1947, Jonkman named two of the same alleged State Department officials—Keeney and Duran—even though they were not then with the State Department. Jonkman also hurled some accusations at Joseph Panuch, then deputy assistant secretary of state. Actually Panuch was the man who eased out Keeney and Duran, but Jonkman attacked him anyway.

As a result, Panuch sued Congressman Jonkman and the publisher of the Washington Times-Herald for libel. The suit against the Times-Herald publisher had to be dropped because of her death, but the Congressman from Michigan compromised the suit with an official abject apology which stated: "It was not my intention to accuse you of lying or of any other improper conduct in connection with your duties as deputy assistant secretary of state during your tenure of office." The Congressman also paid Panuch's court costs and, incidentally, was defeated for re-election.

But now, after both the voters and Mr. Panuch took care of the Republican Congressman from Michigan, almost exactly the same charges are shouted by the Republican Senator from Wisconsin.

Truman Preaches

With Bible in hand, Baptist Harry Truman preached a sermon the other day to a dozen Methodist ministers. He started off by assuring: "Well, I am not going to preach a sermon."

Nevertheless he fingered through his Bible, read two chapters out of Isaiah, and upon this based his hope for the peace and happiness of the world.

"You said you didn't intend to preach a sermon, but you have actually preached an excellent sermon," responded Bishop J. Ralph Magee, head of the Methodist Church in Illinois, when the President had finished.

"I am sure that all the gentlemen present would be happy to have Harry Truman fill their pulpits any time he could find it possible," added Illinois' Sen. Scott Lucas, who had introduced the ministers at the White House.

This brought applause from the ministers.

Truman went on to congratulate them for coming to Washington to study their government, and suggested that more people should visit the capital to study what the President and Congress are up against.

"Mr. Lucas is carrying a very heavy load on the hill, and it would be difficult for me to reach my objectives without his assistance," Truman added.

As a parting shot, the President reminded the visiting ministers that his primary "theme in life is to bring peace to mankind."

Ingrid's Baby

On Capitol Hill, the big issues of the day are not always discussed on the floor of the Senate, but in the senators' private restaurant. There, senators are franker than when their words are recorded by a stenographer for posterity to read.

But in the Senate restaurant today, hottest topic is not Russia, nor China, nor surplus potatoes—but Ingrid Bergman's baby.

Virginia's Sen. Willis Robertson is firm in the view that society must frown on Ingrid's illicit romance with Director Roberto Rossellini and the majority agree. Privately, however, senators sympathize with Miss Bergman's right to live her own life.

"I guess they must have fallen crazy in love," mused Texas' elderly Sen. Tom Connally over his bean soup.

Mrs. Barkley Gavels

The most charming gavel-banger on Capitol Hill is now Mrs. Alben Barkley, or Madame Vice President.

While her husband presides over the Senate, she presides over the Senate ladies every Tuesday. They meet to roll bandages for the Red Cross, to plan an annual tea for the first lady, or just to gossip.

Mrs. Barkley didn't go out and compete for the job of presiding officer; she married it. In fact, the news of this new responsibility was broken rather coyly by none other than the Vice President.

"Do you know anything about parliamentary procedure?" asked Barkley with feigned innocence.

"Heavens, why?" was the suspicious reply.

"Well, you are going to have to preside over the Senate ladies," announced the Vice President.

Mrs. Barkley thought it over for a minute, then replied: "Well, I've been in Red Cross groups for 15 years. We never needed any parliamentary procedure."

But just to be on the safe side, the Vice President gave his wife a few easy lessons. Whether it was this or her own tact, the second lady has been a big hit as a presiding officer.

Lustron Fiasco Proves Again That Haste Makes Waste

By Bruce Biossat

The country's costliest experiment in mass-producing prefabricated homes apparently is doomed to failure. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has decided to start foreclosure proceedings against the Lustron Corporation, maker of all-steel dwellings.

The RFC has loaned the Columbus, O., firm $37,500,000 in an effort to get it well-launched on big-scale housing operations. Both the company and the agency figure foreclosure may cost the government $30,000,000 of that sum.

The Lustron case is a sad history of dreams never realized. It is made all the more dismal by the fact that the project seems to have had the blessing of high government officials, probably including President Truman, from the beginning.

Why were these men so interested in Lustron? From the days of Wilson Wyatt, former federal housing expediter, there's been a notion in Washington that a well-developed prefabricated housing industry would go far toward bringing the cost of a decent home down to the average man's level.

At the same time, it was felt this goal couldn't be achieved simply by waiting for the tiny prefabricated housing output of established companies to swell into the desired heavy production. Government interest centered on initiating a bold effort to telescope this growth process.

The way to do it, Wyatt and others decided, was to help ambitious firms get quickly into automotive-style mass production of houses. The Lustron Company turned out to be the prize guinea pig in this plan. It gained control of former aviation plant space in Columbus. The RFC lent it money for machinery and operating expenses. Big things were in the wind, and the promises were lavish.

But somehow the dream always remained just out of reach. Many problems arose. It was hard to find the necessary skilled labor force, to set up a sensible selling organization. Continued rising costs wrecked hopes of a really cheap sales price.

Several times Lustron came back for more money to keep going until it could "get over the hump." The story was always about the same: "Just let us have a few more millions and we'll really be rolling." So much government money had been put into the experiment it looked unwise to let Lustron sink while there was still any hope at all. But, inevitably, there had to be an end to doling out funds without results.

The government has decided that moment has arrived. This doesn't mean the prefabricated housing industry has failed. There are numerous small companies doing well in the field, with a few showing impressive growth. But the evident collapse of the government's bright dream does seem to mean there'll be no spectacular catapulting of the industry onto a level with the motor makers. Progress henceforth will likely be slower than hoped for—but surer.

What's Sauce for the Goose

The reporters who work in the press galleries at the U. S. Capitol are jealous of their independence, as well they might be. Their freedom is symbolized partly in a rule that bars anyone from the galleries who has ties with government.

But this rule is now having a curious effect. It is denying use of the galleries to reporters representing the U. S. government, but allowing full privileges to newsmen from Tass, the official Russian agency.

Tass won a libel suit in Britain on the ground it is an arm of the government and thus should have diplomatic immunity. So there can't be any argument on its official status.

Yet the Washington press corps accepts Tass as if it were independent. Meanwhile the capital newsmen are refusing to allow our own State Department to have reporters in the galleries to gather news for dispatch to foreign lands over the Voice of America programs.

The department says the regular capital reporters naturally stress news from the U. S. angle, and it wants material more useful for foreign distribution. The reasoning sounds pretty good. But if the press corps remains firm in refusal, the least it can do is to apply its rule with equal force against Russian government men.

• So They Say

Under Democratic leadership, your government intends to stimulate increasing returns of capital into new productive investment. It will curb monopoly and provide incentives to new and independent enterprise.
—Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman.

Doubt as to the ability of the Commodity Credit Corporation to carry out its obligations could cause chaotic conditions and possible collapse of the farm price structure.
—Agriculture Secretary Charles Brannan.

—O—

When compared with what the men and women of many other countries in the world have today, each of us can well apply to himself the colloquial judgment, "We never had it so good."

John 12:5; Matt. 26:14—16, 23, 25; 27:3, 5

THE STEPS DOWN

The most penetrating story of the results of egocentricity is seen in Judas. Judas began high, a loyal disciple. But—

First: He thought one could give too much to Jesus. (John 12:5.) He objected to the woman's lavish gift. His objection was a sign of inward holding back. Second: "What will you give me" (Matthew 26:15, Moffatt.) Note, he was the center—"Give ME." That request was the first step down for the prodigal son: "Give me." When anyone begins to say, "Give me," he is on the way down. Third: "He sought opportunity to betray him." (Matthew 26:16.) He tried to arrange his world so that it would not fall to pieces. Fourth: But that world did fall to pieces. Said Jesus, "One who has dipped." (Matthew 26:23, Moffatt.) "Surely," said Judas, "it is not I?" And the answer came back, "Is it not?" (Matthew 26:25, Moffatt.) The heart of things began to be revealed—his world collapsed.

Fifth: "Then Judas . . . saw"—his world beginning to tumble to pieces. (Matthew 27.3.) (a) He "repented" (verse 3), but he repented in the wrong direction. He turned in useless regret to the high priest and elders—turned to them, instead of to Jesus. (b) "He brought back." (Verse 3.) He tried to steady his tottering world by a half-way restitution. He brought back the money, but retained himself. (c) "What does that matter to us?" (Verse 4.) He finds his world, built up so securely, not trustable. His companions let him down. Sin has no cohesion in it. Sin doesn't care. (d) "Flung down" (verse 5) the money, the thing that seemed to matter so much in the beginning. The precious thing turned to ashes (e) "Went off" (verse 5)—off from opportunity, from life, from Christ. Sin is centrifugal. (f) "Hanged himself" (verse 5)—the self that was so demanding and so central in the beginning, saying "Give me," became impossible to live with. So he hanged the self that started him down.

Complete collapse will be the end of an egocentric self.

My Father, I see that this imperious, demanding self, like the camel's nose inside the tent, will soon put me out of this earthly habitation. I shall soon be able to live with it—unless I give it back to Thee for cleansing, for adjustment, for a new basis of living. I do. Amen.

The Bible Story

JEREMIAH

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 21st of a series from the Old Testament. The text is condensed from selections by Houston Harte for the book, "In Our Image." Illustration by Guy Rowe also from the book.

Why is this people of Jerusalem slidden back by a perpetual backsliding? They hold fast deceit, they refuse to return. The wise men are ashamed: they have rejected the word of the Lord; and what wisdom is in them? For every one is given to covetousness, from the prophet even unto the priest every one dealeth falsely. For they have healed the hurt of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace. I will surely consume them, saith the Lord; and the things that I have given them shall pass away from them.

The Lord our God hath put us to silence, and given us the water of gall to drink, because we have sinned against the Lord, We looked for peace, but no good came; and for a time of health, and behold trouble. For the hurt of my people I am hurt. Is there no balm in Gilead; is there no physician there? why then is not the health of my people recovered?

And Hananiah the prophet spake in the house of the Lord, in the presence of all the people, saying, Thus speaketh the Lord of Hosts, I have broken the yolk from off Jerimiah's neck, and brake it. And Hananiah spake, saying, Thus saith the Lord; Even so will I break the yolk of Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon from the neck of all the nations within two years. Then said Jeremiah, Hear now, Hananiah; the Lord hath not sent thee, but thou makest this people to trust in a lie. Therefore, this year thou shalt die, because thou hast spoken rebellion against the Lord. So Hananiah died the same year in the seventh month.

Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with Israel. I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me. From the least of them unto the greatest of them saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and will remember their sin no more.

In that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, weeping: they shall seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the way to Zion, saying, Come and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant. My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their resting place. All that found them have devoured them: and their adversaries said, We offend not, because they have sinned against the Lord, the habitation of justice, the hope of their fathers. And I will bring Isarel again to his habitation. In those days, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Isarel shall be sought for, and there shall none: for I will pardon them whom I reserve.

Lamentations

Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me. Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and there is none to comfort her. Behold, O Lord, and consider to whom thou hast done this. Shall the women eat their children? shall the pries and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord? Thou hast removed my soul far off from peace.

It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not. The Lord is my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him. The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. For the Lord will not cast off for ever: But though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitudes of his mercies. For he doth not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men.

Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord. Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.

I called upon thy name, O Lord, thou hast heard my voice; hide not thine ear at my breathing, at my cry. Thou drewest near in the day that I called upon thee: thou saidst, Fear not. O Lord, thou hast pleaded the causes of my soul; thou hast redeemed my life. O Lord, thou hast seen my wrong; judge thou my cause.....

Thou, O Lord, remainest for ever; thy throne from generation to generation.

Music Modes

SEDALIA Music lovers have fairly beaten a path to Kansas City the past week for the Oscar Levant concerts of Wednesday and Thursday nights and the big Valentine Heart benefit of Tuesday night with Jo Stafford and Paul Weston. Both of these programs were in the auditorium of the Music Hall.

Next week on Thursday night there will probably be another excited and eager, but small group of Sedalians that will journey to the city for the "1950 Innovations in Modern Music" of modernist Stan Kenton.

This concert is the only one scheduled in this area and the followers of the Kenton flare of jazz will turn out in droves. The forty-piece organization includes sixteen strings. The addition of strings to a Kenton unit is something entirely new and from all reports from the west coast the strings do much to add to Kenton's individuality of style.

The strings are balanced up with ten violins, three violas and three cellos. The rhythm will consist of drums, guitar, string bass, conga and bongo drums and of all things, tuba. Kenton will be on the piano when required. The brass will be held down with five trumpets, five trombones and two French horns. The over sized jazz band will have reeds totalin five; two alto, two tenors and a baritone. The reedmen will double on other reed instruments such as oboe, basson.

Ten Arrangers

Besides this tremendous collection of top jazz men in the country there are ten arrangers writing the book. These include Kenton, Pete Rugolo, who has worked with an orchestra behind vocalists, Mel Torme and June Christy the past year, Neal Hefti and Johnny Richards. These men of modern music are the country's most progressive arrangers and their efforts have been widely acclaimed as the orchestra works its way around on the Pacific coast. The orchestra opened its 1950 tour of the nation in Portland, Ore., February 10th.

Prior to the official opening concert, however, the aggregation moved into the Los Angeles Philharmonic auditorium and presented an informal workshop preview for the disc jockeys, music students and fans in the L. A. area. The audience of this workshop preview voted for their eight favorite compositions and these works were waxed into an album by Capitol. The sides are due to be released soon.

Plans To Make Picture

The people who will jam the Music Hall Thursday night will be ahead of the jazz lovers in the east. After Kenton and his gang return home from their three months on the road and over seventy concert dates Stan will retire to his home in California and make plans for the 1951 vintage of "Innovations in Modern Music." Aside from that schedule Kenton plans to make a picture. This he will return to produce himself. There are also plans for a music school where he and his associates can foster young musicians, who are eager to learn the facts of modern music and its various forms of jazz.

June Christy, the Kenton mainstay for the majority of his units, is back chirping for a cool one thousand dollars per week. This probably doen't make Bob Cooper, Kenton tenor man unhappy; he is her husband.

Features Many Old Sidemen

The unit features many of the old sidemen such as Shelly Manne, drum, Laurindo Almeida, guitar, Buddy Childers, Chico Alvarez, trumpets, Milt Bernhart, Bart Varsalona, trombones, Art Pepper, Bob Cooper and Bob Gioga, saxes. Other members of the various sections are certainly not unknown, for most of them have been in the country's top units for many years.

The Kenton concert in Kansas City will certainly be something to see and hear.

In the March edition of R. C. A., Victor's Picture Record Review, page five, there is a full page story on the Freddy Martin band as they appeared in the Shamrock Hotel in Houston, Tex. In one of the accompanying photographs sits Andy Kostelas, sax man, well known former Sedalia musician.

Andy has been with the Martin unit for several years now. His parents and the other members of his family are now living in Los Angeles, Calif. His father formerly owned and operated the Sedalia Hat shop located at 229 South Ohio avenue.

Porcupines are well supplied with quills at birth, but the stiff quality does not develop until shortly after.

Looking Backward

Forty Years Ago

W. B. Taylor, the race horse owner, returned from Council Grove, Kas., where he purchased two young trotters from E. F. Bell.

F. T. Mulcahy awarded a contract to T. H. Johnson for the erection of two dwelling houses of seven rooms each on the east side of Moniteau avenue between Second and Third street.

E. J. Beycler was engaged to appear as "Shylock" in the Shakespearean selection of "The Merchant of Venice" at the Maccabees entertainment to be given in the Royal Tribe of Joseph hall.

C. W. Daugherty, circuit clerk, received an expensive watch from a friend sent him from Berne, Switzerland. It is in a square shaped case and is very unique.

Prof. A. J. Smith, a former superintendent of Sedalia schools, now of Springfield, Ill., was the speaker at the assembly at the Sedalia High school.

Sixty couples attended last night a St. Valentine's masquerade ball given by the Cadonia club at the Sedalia hall.

The lowest reading of the temperature this morning as reported by the Economy Steam Heating company was three degrees above zero.

E. J. Adamson, manager of the Jesse French company's piano and music store, returned from a business trip to St. Louis.

M. C. Devine, foreman of the car shops of the M. K. & T. here, sold his suburban property south of Sedalia near Twenty-third street, to George Barm, of Cooper county.

The Doctor Says—

Treatment of Broken Bones Requires Very Careful Work

BY EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
Written for NEA Service

Slipping on icy sidewalks or streets is one of the many causes for broken bones. Now a fracture requires attention as soon as possible. A person with a broken bone should not move or be moved except with great care, as the fracture may be made worse by motion. Splinting with a board or some other rigid substance is advisable before moving.

If a person fractures the lower leg while wearing high boots, the boots should not be taken off until after reaching the hospital, as the boot itself serves as a sort of splint. The proper splinting and moving of a patient who has sustained a fracture may make a great deal of difference in the setting of the fracture and in the time which it takes to heal.

Once a person who has a fracture has been brought to the hospital, skilled care is important. X-ray films must be taken to show just where the fracture is and the position of the fargments. To do this, the X-ray films have to be "shot" from different angles.

If the two parts of bone can be brought together in good position then healing should take place easily, especially in younger people. When the fragments are brought in proper position, the parts must be kept from moving to give the bone a chance to grow together. This rest is generally accomplished by using a plaster-of-paris cast.

Sometimes it is difficult to put the fragments back where they will heal properly and in good position. It may be necessary to pull the pieces apart with weights until they can be slipped in place. Occasionally, it is necessary to do what is called an open operation and use a knife to enter the fragmented area, remove small pieces of bone and place the two ends of bone together, perhaps inserting pins or staples to hold them in place.

Healing Takes Time

It is no easy job to select the best treatment and to apply it properly. The healing, or knitting, of bone takes a long time and almost anyone who has sustained a fracture must make up his mind to a long period of disability.

A fracture can be anything from a slight crack in the bone to a severe break in which the bone is knocked into small bits or sticks out through the flesh. As a result there is a great deal of difference in what may need to be done in the way of treatment.

Dr. Jordan will answer questions from his readers in a special column once a week. Watch for it.

End of a Chapter

By Edwin Rutt

THE STORY: Alice Pine, secretary to Muriel Halleck, who writes popular stories under the name of "Jo Palgrave," has discovered that she is strangely attracted to Brent, Muriel's husband, in spite of Alice's suspicions that Brent cruelly whipped Rick, his four-year-old adopted son, and in spite of Alice's feeling of loyalty to Muriel. After Brent kisses her, she goes to the train to meet Muriel, who has been conferring with her literary agent in New York. Muriel has just revealed that she has had a conference with an executive of a Hollywood film company.

* * *

XXIV

MURIEL HALLECK had stopped for breath. Alice now knew the reason for her excitement. If this man Alec Crowther had flown from Hollywood to see Muriel:

"You've got a Hollywood contract now and a fabulous salary?" Alice put her thoughts into a question.

"Right, my dear. And that's not all. Crowther's buying two serials of mine for filming. So—" Muriel's strange eyes sparkled "—California, here I come."

"But when?"

"Just as soon as I can close this place and—well, do something else that has to be done. But I want you to go out to Hollywood first. And find us some wonderful and wickedly-expensive place to live."

"But, Muriel," Alice's head spun, "you won't need a secretary if you're working in a studio."

"Oh, yes, I will. Look, dear, I wouldn't be setting foot in Hollywood if it weren't for my free-lance work. I won't drop that and I told Crowther so. The net of it is, I'm to have plenty of time for private writing. Especially to finish this novel."

"But—"

"Oh, my goodness!" Muriel exclaimed. "Here's a wonderful chance for both of us—I'll make it wonderful for you too. And all you can say is 'but.' What's the matter now?"

Alice hesitated. "I was just wondering—Oh, never mind it."

Muriel's eyes were suddenly shrewd. "About Brent, eh? And Rick?"

"Yes, I was," Alice admitted.

"Listen, darling!" Muriel sounded rather sharp. "Brent has his job. And much as I'd adore having Rick, it's impractical. Between the studio and my own stuff, I'll be bushed all the time. And I couldn't ask you to be a nursemaid."

"I wouldn't mind."

"No," said Muriel decisively, "you wouldn't. But I've made my plans. It's all settled. We've had everything out today. Brent's keeping his job in Providence. He's getting an apartment and a housekeeper who'll look after Rick. Everything's going to be just fine and dandy."

Alice said nothing. But she didn't like the thought of Rick, cooped up in a moderately large city after the space and freedom of Grosvenor Point. Why could not Brent have agreed to a transfer of the entire family? Had his job, in this short time, become so important and lucrative?

"Well," Muriel said impatiently, "California's pretty nice. Is it so terribly hard to make up your mind?"

Suddenly it wasn't. For Alice saw a means of escape from a delicate and dangerous situation. A chance to break cleanly before things went any further. To put a continent between herself and an enigma of a man with whom it was both folly and disloyalty to be falling in love.

"I think," she said slowly, "that I'd like to go, Muriel. If you're sure you want me?"

"Sure, she says!" Muriel gave a ringing laugh. "And me on my knees begging her. Oh, darling, I'm tickled silly!"

* * *

CHUCK WISNER studied the dregs of his third highball and said: "If I weren't a trifle tight today, Toots, I wouldn't have the nerve to tell you. But you're a darn fool."

Alice blinked her blue eyes. She had met Chuck by accident this afternoon and listened to his siren's song anent drinks at Tolliver Inn.

"That's pleasant," she said. "In just what way?"

"For going to California," Chuck told her.

"Well, now? That was decided Sunday. This is only Tuesday. How on earth did you know?"

He grinned. "Small town, big grapevine. But that's beside the point." His grin vanished. "You're needed here, my friend. Very badly."

She stared at him. She had never seen Chuck this serious before. "By whom, may I ask?"

"By," Chuck said, a little owlishly, "a very swell guy."

Alice laughed. "Are you kidding, Chuck? It's corny, but—this is so sudden."

"Look," Chuck said, "I'm kidding nobody. What I'm doing is a—a partial John Alden. And if Brent ever finds out, he'll raise holy Ned. But I don't give a hoot. Because I think you ought to know it, if you're so dumb that you don't already."

Alice heard her voice, rising slightly. "I haven't the faintest notion what you're talking about."

He sighed. "Okay. I'll make like even you can understand. Brent Halleck"—he drew a breath—"is absolutely and sincerely—and honestly—nuts about you."

* * *

ALICE tried to ignore a delicious little thrill. It was one thing to know it, privately, intuitively. But—coming from this strangely serious Chuck, Brent's best friend, it was even better.

"Y-you're crazy," she made herself say.

"Am I?" He fixed her with green pixie eyes. "I wish you could see your face. It's all lit up like a pin-ball machine."

"Oh, Chuck, don't be such a dope. But even if—if it were true, Brent has a perfectly sweet wife."

"Sweet wife? Oh, yeah. So I've heard. But, are you in love with Brent, Alice?"

discard pile so long as you have 2 cards to match it in your hand, or a wild card and one matching card. You can go out, or make one or more melds. You also can take a one-card discard pile if you can play it on one of your completed canastas.

The person who told you that you could not take a one-card discard pile and go out may have confused this situation with the regulation regarding a player who holds only one card. If you have only one card in your hand, and there is only one card in the discard pile, you cannot take that card and go out as long as there are cards in the stock pile. However, if the stock pile is exhausted, you must take the one card in the discard pile, if it is a player on one of your melds, and go out. If you cannot use it, then the game is over.

* * *

Q—Our whole family enjoys Canasta, but everybody has read a different book on it. Dad came up with a new one last night. He says that when you make an initial meld using the top card of the discard pile, you can take only that one card; that the pack then becomes an unfrozen pack for your side, and at your next turn you or your partner may take the pack if you can legally do so. Is he right?

A—No. I am afraid Dad made up a house rule there. Any time you take the top card of the discard pile, you have to take the whole pile.

* * *

Q—I made an initial meld of 3 aces. A little later my opponents melded 3 aces. At first I claimed they could not do this, but then I could see that I was wrong, and I agreed that they should be able to meld their 3 aces. Later on I picked up the fourth ace. I did not have any black treys, and I wanted to keep my opponents from getting the pack, which was frozen. I decided to discard the fourth ace, feeling quite sure that it would be impossible for my opponent to take it and pick up the pack. However, my opponent claimed that I could not discard a card I could meld. I would like to have you clear us up on this whole question.

A—You were right, of course, in coming to the conclusion that your opponents could meld 3 aces, regardless of the fact that you already had melded 3 of them. I have seen cases where both sides completed a canasta of the same kind.

You certainly can discard a card that you could meld. Very often it may pay to discard not only one card of a meld you have down, but 2 or even 3 of them, in order to keep your opponents from getting the pack. This is especially true if you have a canasta and another possibility of one.

Discarding cards that you could meld makes it more difficult for the opponents to pick up the pack, and they may be forced to make an unsafe discard which will enable you or your partner to get the pack on the next round.

Q—If there is only one card in the discard pile, may I take it and go out? I was told that there must be more than one card in the pile in order to pick it up and go out. Which is correct?

A—You can take a one-card

Says Marriage Ideals Spoil U. S. Women

GAINESVILLE, Fla., —(AP)— American women are spoiled, says Dr. Perihan Cambel, Turkish-born associate professor at the University of Florida. "In America," she says, "a woman thinks only of getting married. In Europe a woman thinks first of her career."

Here doing cancer research, Dr. Cambel says Turkish women who attend the Universities take military training in summer, learning marching, shooting, radar, nursing and food service, and many have entered aviation.

"But wrong ideas you have about Turkey do not compare with ideas we have about America. You have no conception of the warped picture of American life one gets from seeing only Hollywood movies. Everyone lives in skyscrapers, wears furs and there is gold in the streets."

Small Size Radio and Video Expected

NEW YORK—(AP)—Experts who delight in trying to look into the future say they forsee the day when radio sets will be small enough to be carried in the pocket like a fountain pen. Also, they say, it is possible television receivers might be developed to a point where they can be worn like a pair of overgrown eyeglasses.

Television Cameras Do Tricks

NEW YORK —(AP)— The television camera, heart of which is an electron tube, is beginning to develope tricks that outtrick the movie cameras.

For instance, it can take one-half an image while a companion camera supplies the other half, thus putting two images on the screen at the same time.

Also it can make it look like a person can walk through a solid wall, and accomplish numerous other seeming impossibilities.

Former Stars

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(AP)—Michigan State Basketball Coach Al Kercher and his assistant, Chet Aubuchon, are former Spartan cage stars. KKircher also won letters in football and baseball. Aubuchon won All-America honors in the cage sport.

Here's a disc with the rugged strength and durability needed for fast speeds over uneven land. All gang bearings are linked directly to the frame drawbar — provides straight-line pull from hitch to gang bearings.

Strong tubular steel frame combines strength and flexibility with light weight. Here you have a light harrow for loose soil, which can be weighted for chopping heavy growth.

15-ft. and 12-ft. sizes fold to go through a 10-ft. gate — no lifting — your tractor does the work. Stop in and let us show you.

Syria Frets Over French Trade

DAMASCUS, Syria—(AP)—Syria and the Lebanon are worried about their growing unfavorable trade balance with France. They imported 9,460,000,000 French francs worth of goods from France in 1949, compared to 3,645,000,000 francs in value in 1949, compared to 631,000,000 in 1948.

Allotment Answer

DES MOINES — (AP) — Orval Dahms thinks he has the answer to the corn acreage allotment program—purebred cattle. On his farm of 320 acres Dahms raises only 35 to 40 acres of corn each year. All of the rest of his land is used for pasture and hay.

Dahm feeds all of the corn he raises. He never has participated in the government support price programs. He is not affected by the acreage reductions which corn farmers will have to make if they wish to participate in the support program.

Champion Muskrat Skinner Says He'll Not Trample Again

By Hal Boyle

CAMBRIDGE, Md., —(AP)—The world's Champion muskrat skinner says he's going to quit trampling the marshes.

"Man I've handled many a muskrat in my time, and I have less now than I did when I started out 40 years ago," said Curtis Insley.

Insley, a tall, powerful man of 53, is to the fine old American art of muskrat skinning what Joe DiMaggio is to baseball. At least Maryland's famed Eastern shore.

It came as no surprise to him last Saturday when he won the National Muskrat Skinning Contest at the Cambridge out door show against trappers from Maine to Louisiana.

"I really never have been beat fair," said Insley, "And that ain't bragging."

Skinned Five Muskrats

To win the $250 first prize Insley skinned five muskrats in one minute, 50.4 seconds. As usual one of his cheief rivals was George North, an older trapper.

To skin a muskrat you first go out in the marshes and catch one with a steel trap, and to an outsider this looks like the easiest part of the whole thing.

The skinning can be done in two ways. Insley is a lap skinner, who works seated with the muskrat between his knees. North is a foot skinner. He skins with one knee on the floor and one foot on the muskrat's tail.

In either case incisions are made at the base of the animal's tail. He is then shucked inside out and separated from his pelt by a series of rapid knife slices, any one of which could take off the trapper's finger. And the pelts must be recoved in marketable condition. They go into fur coats.

Likes To Skin 25 In Contest

Insley doesn't think five muskrats are enough to show what the contests can really do.

"I like to skin 25," he said. "That way you can get a hand in it.

"I can skin 1,000 in ten hours —and smoken a few cigarets doing it, too."

Insley has been going out to the marshes, the brackish wastelands that vegetarian muskrats love, since he was 13.

In a single 74-day season he once trapped 2,900 muskrats, or about 40 a day. He works on a share-alike basis with the owner of the marshland.

"I should have a piece of marsh myself," he said a little wistfully. He farms and does day labor out of trapping season.

In his lifetime he has seen the pelts sell from forty cents to $4.00 or more.

"I've made as much as $1,800 in a season," he said. "But I'll be lucky if I clear $50 this year."

Good pelts now fetch about $1.25. And the skinned muskrat carcass sells for 40 to 50 cents. They are listed on the menus hereabouts as "marsh rabbits."

'They're Good Eating'

Steady trapping and an increase of preying natural enemies—owls and raccoons—have cut down the muskrat population.

"So far I've only taken about 100," said Insley wryly. "I think I'll stop 'ratting after this year. Man, it is pretty hard to trample the marshes all day long."

His neighbors take this declaration with a grain of marsh salt, however. They feel sure Insley will be out there trampling as long as there is a muskrat still unskinned.

Chinese Fear Russian Bear

TAIPEI, Formosa, Feb. 18.—(AP)—The year of the ox ended Thurs. midnight and the year of the tiger began. But here on this Nationalist Chinese Island bastion there was fear of the Russian bear.

Nevertheless the new lunar year was celebrated throughout this island. Firecrackers were set off to frighten away evil spirits. Everybody wore their finest. All realized a fateful year lay ahead.

By ordinary logic, many think Chiang Kai-Shek and his diehard Nationalists should be crushed before the year of the Tiger ends. Somehow, though, the Nationalists think they will survive it.

They have convinced themselves that the Communists, although seemingly on the crest of victory, are already on the road to decline.

A year ago Friday North China belonged to the Reds. But the rich Yangtze valley, Nanking, Shanghai, Canton, Chungking, Chengtu and all of the southland was still Chiang's.

They expect the Chinese Reds to assail them this year, probably with the help of Russian planes and naval forces.

These sketches, taken from a government report, show what happens to a small house, a tree and a dog in the path of an atomic blast. The calm of the top sketch is broken by the presure phase of the blast, which whips the tree, tosses the dog and begins to shake the house apart. When the pressure is past there comes a lull, followed by the suction phase of the blast. Here the air rushes back to fill a partial vacuum. The tree is shredded, roof is ripped from house and dog is flung against the wall. Now the air is still again and nothing remains but ruins and a dead dog. Diagram at right shows time relation to blast, measurement of which is not disclosed, for security reasons.

Propose Cut In Liquor Tax

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—A one-third slash in the excise tax on liquor was proposed to congress Friday by the alcoholic beverages industry—meaning that drinkers would pay about $500,000,000 less in taxes a year.

The present federal tax is $9 per gallon for 100 proof liquor. The industry wants this cut to $6.

The present tax, the industry said, is shifting consumption "from tax-paid, legally-produced distilled spirits to moonshined tax-avoiding distilled spirits," with a loss of millions of dollars to the federal treasury.

The bank also lists assets of $10,000 surplus and $5,000 undivided profits.
